CASE AGAINST BARTOLINI OUTLINED

Pale of face Mrs. Isabelle Murphy of Allston, in Dedham superior court today testified that a scarf found in Boston Harbor last October was that of her friend Mrs. Gratyce Asquith, allegedly slain for love.

Oscar V. Bartolini, Quincy realty and bandy man who is on trial for the murder, heard the testimony of the petite, brunette witness without a change of expression.

He remained as calm as when earlier in the day he had heard himself painted as a woman-hater who waded, barefoot, in the blood of his victim.

Identification of the bag by Mrs. Murphy, who said Bartolini had on several occasions been a member of parties in her Commonwealth avenue apartment, with Mrs. Asquith, was supported by Dr. Ben-

Straw Vote Gives Tobin Early Lead

Strength in Boston Race Shown by Brett

By FRANK K. REILLY

The straw ballots for mayor cast by Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser readers were being blown in on a gale of popular interest today.

Maurice J. Tobin, now serving his sixth year in the Boston School Committee and former chairman of that body, leads in early returns.

Scattered votes have been received for the other leading candidates.

Carleton L. Brett, of West Tremlett street, Dorchester, the Social Justice candidate, shows surprising strength in early straw balloting and there is every indication that if his candidacy progresses as it has indicated he will receive a

Glance by Judge Leads to Rescue of 3 Children

The lives of three children, the oldest seven, the youngest two months, were saved today when Judge Paul J. MacDonald of Chelsea glanced through a courtroom window and saw the three trapped on a flaming third floor piazza.

Suspending the session, Judge MacDonald directed court officers to rush to the aid of the children. Sergt. John Kennedy of the Chelsea police, also ran down the courthouse steps toward the burning building.

He took Dorothy, 2 years old and William Goodrich, 2 months old in his arms and directed Robert Goodrich, 7 years old, to follow him to the street.

The fire started when sparks from a chimney ignited a mattress on the floor of the piazza. The loss was placed at $50.

SOVIET TO USE ARMED FORCE ON 'PIRATES'

Rome, Sept. 8—Reacting swiftly to a second curt note from Soviet Russia renewing charges that Italian torpedoes sent two Russian steamers to the bottom of the Mediterranean, Italy prepared today for a sharp and decisive break with Moscow.

The Italian government, it was learned, will shortly announce its formal adherence to the pact against Bolshevism signed recently by Japan and Germany.

Italy hitherto has merely approved the agreement, without actually going it as a third party. Formal adherence will have the effect of lining Japan, Germany and

O'Hara Editorial Makes Enemies

Today "The Insider" tells of Walter E. O'Hara's invasion of Rhode Island, later to become the horse race king that state forces now hope to topple. This behind-the-scenes account was started in last Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser and continued in the Boston Evening American because of a newspaper war in Rhode Island which prevents the reader from obtaining the story in an unbiased way.

By THE INSIDER

Providence, Sept. 8—O'Hara "moved into" Rhode Island after his dreams of horse racing and big financial enterprises in Massachusetts were received with attention that might be described best as mediocre.

Born in Middleboro, Mass., but far from the Rhode Island line and later a resident of Fall River, he naturally was somewhat acquainted in Little Rhody.

Following some Fall River newspaper experience he was employed at $25 a week on a Boston newspaper but aroused the ire of an editor who fired him with the not too cheerful prediction that he'd never make $25 anywhere.

This rebuff is believed by many

Dorothy Bundy Defeats Alice Marble in 'Semi'

Forest Hills, N. Y. Sept. 8 (AP)—Dorothy May Bundy, husky, free-hitting daughter of May Sutton Bundy, today tossed a major bombshell into the women's national singles championships by eliminating defending champion Alice Marble of San Francisco, 1—6, 7—5, 6—1, to advance into the semi-final round.

Miss Bundy, ranked eighth in the 1938 first ten, and seeded sixth in this tournament, stunned a crowd of 6000 with her elimination of the No. 1 ranking and seeded star of this country.

Run ragged by her own errors in the first set, the muscular girl whose mother was the first woman to win the Wimbledon title, settled down to a determined battle from the baseline in the next two sets.

In the second, trailing at 5—4, she staved off match point by Miss Marble, won the two-deuced game to draw even at 5-all, then captured the next two to square the match. The 11th game which she won on her own service, went to 20 points, and saw Miss Marble have game point in her grasp six times before her youthful rival triumphed.

In the third, after a 10-minute rest, Dorothy ran up a 5-0 lead. She won the deciding point in the fifth game as the 1936 titleholder slipped on the base-line and badly skinned her left knee.

She applied iodine to the wound, rallied briefly to win the sixth game on her own service and trail at 1-5, then dropped the seventh and final game as she belted a drive over the base line after a long rally that had kept the crowd on the edge of their seats.

QUINN BARES THREATS IN RACE WAR

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Providence, R. I., Sept. 8—Governor Robert E. Quinn today told newspapermen that since he had started his fight to oust Walter E. O'Hara as president and general manager of Gansett Park he had received many threats on his life.

This confirmed the story revealed exclusively earlier today in the Boston Evening American.

The governor also said that he had requested the chief of police and the United States postal authorities and that he understood they were working on the case.

Governor Quinn was yesterday defeated by Harold Gross, Gansett Park and trotting in Rhode Island if O'Hara wins his ousting, described the racing czar Friday as "an avalanche of vile and scurrilous mail."

40,000 PARADE PAST HITLER IN LABOR MARCH

Nuremberg, Germany, Sept. 8 (AP)—Rank on rank of spade-carrying workers goose-stepped past Adolf Hitler today in a gigantic demonstration of the compulsory labor service—Nazi Germany's army of workers.

"You are as firmly welded into the new state as the armed forces, Reichsführer Hitler proclaimed to the 40,000 stripped-to-the-waist as they lined up on Zeppelin field.

"He who fails to understand the new Germany must come here to see this demonstration," said the Führer proudly.

The labor service commander, Konstantin Hierl, attended a similar parade before the movie then 100,000 people.

"We serve God by serving Germany," he said. "This is a demonstration against the Jewish materialistic belief that labor is only a money affair, a matter of merchandise."

For half an hour Hitler stood in an open car pumping his arm up and down to salute the detachments of spade carriers, who streamed from a nearby race track, passed through one end of the Nuremberg stadium, and lined up entire to hear Der Führer speak briefly.

Innocent Victims of War Cross China's Bridge of Sighs

Homes in Ruins, Heartbroken Non-Combatants Shuffle Along Road to Nowhere

Across this modern steel bridge in old Shanghai poured these fleeing throngs, seeking refuge in the International Settlement, where they vainly hoped they might be safe from bombing and shelling which marked the outbreak of undeclared war between Chinese and Japanese. PLANES BOMB CHINESE TRAIN; 300 KILLED

BULLETIN

Shanghai, Sept. 8 (INS)—Four transports will be placed at the disposal of Americans wishing to be evacuated from China, United States naval authorities announced today.

Shanghai, Sept. 8 (AP)—At least 300 Chinese non-combatants were killed and 400 injured today in one of the worst disasters suffered by the Japanese air bombs in the three months of undeclared war.

Five railroad cars, packed with Chinese refugees fleeing from the war zone, were blown from the track by Japanese bombers at Songkiang station, 30 miles from Shanghai.

Fifteen hundred Chinese were wedged in the cars at the time when the bombs burst in their midst.

Two densely crowded second-class coaches and three first-class cars were shattered by the explosion. The wreckage piled high and turned over.

CRUSHED IN WRECKAGE

Many of their occupants not killed by the explosion, were crushed to death in the wreckage.

The bombs fell without warning as the train was standing in the Songkiang station, on the line to Hangzhou.

The fearful explosions literally shredded some human forms and smeared debris into the air. The bodies of the dead were scattered in all directions and carried many yards from the wreckage.

Injured and dying non-combatants were sprawled on platforms of the railroad yards as though they had been shot down in battle.

NO SOLDIERS ABOARD

A Chinese spokesman declared the train carried no soldiers and that the station was serving no military purpose. Japanese bombers have up long warnings of trains and heavily damaged a railroad station at Kiangwan today.

Red Cross officials rushed aid from Shanghai to stricken towns and villages. Ten trains left today on the same route, the Songkiang-Chinese hospitals.

Both the Chinese and Japanese meanwhile, took action that increased the peril to foreigners in Shanghai. The Japanese navy announced the last scope for the American-British-French neutrality protest.

The Japanese, answering the three-power note demanding that Chinese planes be withdrawn from a much wider area in the Shanghai zone, declared that [illegible] succeeded by the powers to make sure the safety of foreign residents and interests in the international area.

CHINESE WON'T BUDGE

The Japanese response was made by Vice Admiral Kiyoshi Hasegawa, commander of the Japanese Third Fleet in Chinese waters.

It followed a Chinese refusal to withdraw planes from a zone across the Whangpoo river from the international zone unless the Japanese withdrew planes from the Japanese section which is far removed from modern international settlement and foreign concessions. The foreign settlement and concessions are separated from the Japanese section by the Whangpoo river.

The Chinese declared that the planes were necessary for their defense, would launch only against the Japanese warships or Chinese units and several craft.

It requested a foreign naval officer to inspect the Whangpoo to prove its vessels clear and give foreign ships safe way and said it is ready to help in the search for mines and waterways.

Six Chinese warplanes swooped down on a Japanese battleship and cruiser in the Whangpoo river off Shanghai today, but were driven off by anti-aircraft fire, Japanese naval headquarters announced.

The warplanes, flying in two groups of three each, dropped eight explosive bombs, but none of them touched the warships, the announcement said.

Soviet's New Note Brings Break With Italy Nearer

Daily avidity against the Communism of Soviet Russia.

The new Russian note was handed to Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano by the Soviet charge d'affaires.

REPLY IS UNSATISFACTORY

The note is believed to amount to the point of studied politeness declared the Italian reply unsatisfactory and unsatisfactory, and will continue to assert its accusations against Italy."

Italy refused to accept the first Soviet accusation and protest, and was rejected the first similarly with the second note.

Meanwhile, Mussolini and his aides were regarding as definite that the ships and punishment of the persons responsible for torpedoing them.

Italy demanded assurances from Britain and France that should she attend the conference would not become a tribunal to decide Italian guilt or innocence.

It was believed that Italy in no event would attend unless such assurances were given.

New Note Expresses Russian Defiance

Moscow, Sept. 8 (INS)—Soviet Russia's charges that Italian warplanes torpedoed two Russian merchant ships stand and will not be withdrawn.

This was the defiant message to Fascist Rome today as the Soviet Union accepted an invitation to [illegible] proposed 12-power "piracy" conference, and prepared to make things hot for Italy when the parley gets under way.

The Moscow government assigned M. Dalin to inspection of the charges, instructed the Soviet ambassador in Rome to announce it soon would present its findings, and told questions "unsatisfactory."

Furthermore the embassy was told to inform the Italians that the charges were sustained.

The same items was stressed by Soviet Russia consider the Italian rejection of the Soviet note unsatisfactory, and will continue to assert its accusations against Italy."

Submarines Molest Two British Ships

London, Sept. 8 (INS)—A submarine flying the Spanish Nationalist colors halted the British tanker Degania near the Dodecanese Islands, in the eastern Mediterranean, on night the radio of the vessel advised the owners in a radio message today.

The Degania was halted while en route to Alexandria, Egypt, from Haifax, N. S. B., with a cargo of [illegible] was permitted to proceed and was not damaged.

According to Lloyd's advices received in London, the 7,000-ton British tanker Harita was attacked by an unidentified battleship which also was flying Nationalist colors. The Harita was not damaged.

The Harpa was attacked, the report said, by a submarine 30 miles east of La Goulette, Tunis, following a voyage from Port Said, Egypt.

Spanish Warships Clash in Sea Battle

Algiers, Algeria, Sept. 8 (AP)—A Spanish government fleet of two warships and a destroyer engaged in battle today in the western Mediterranean, it was reported here, in the smallest clash for supply ships reported for the government cause.

The fighting, which lasted for two hours, resulted in no casualties, it was reported here. Messages from the government fleet and the insurgent vessels engaged in the battle.

Just before the battle, the Canadian had turned two Spanish government vessels over to the insurgent authorities at Medina, Spain, it was reported.

Results of the battle were not known, but it was reported that the government vessels were not damaged. With the arrival of the insurgent vessels at Medina, Spain, it was reported here, the entire Spanish government fleet is now in the western Mediterranean.

The French destroyer L'Iphigenie and two torpedo boats put out from Oran to search for the British and destroyers left Gibraltar to help in the search.

Reports of the ensuing battle were heard on the coast for two hours after scheduling.

Betty to Shun Career to Wed

Hollywood, Sept. 8 (AP)—Betty Grable, a blonde bundle of dynamite from Missouri, exploded the puzzle over her future career today.

"I want to be Mrs. Jackie Coogan, for life," the little singer-dancer said.

Curvaceous as a $ sign, with rhythm in her voice and toes, Betty has been tabbed by Paramount as the hottest prospect of the new movie season.

Nevertheless, she intends to be married to Coogan December 18, her 21st birthday, perhaps at the cost of her film success. They have been engaged for two years—nearly a record for Hollywood.

Coogan, already 21, has a million-dollar fortune he earned as a child actor in "The Kid" and other pictures. It is his belief careers and matrimony do not mix.

"Let's go for a long boat ride after the wedding," he has suggested. "We don't need money."

That is Coogan's idea, not Paramount's.

A preview of "This Way, Please," showed shapeliness was not Miss Grable's only pleasing attribute and the publicity tom-toms began beating her praise.

Studio executives, remembering what the trademark "platinum blonde" did for Jean Harlow, christened Betty "THE Glamour Girl."

They raised her billing in "Thrill of a Lifetime," now in production, and promised her the lead in "College Swing." A famous artist selected her figure as an all-American standard.

All this, in Hollywood, is the way a star is born. For such a chance, Betty had been waiting eight years.

Now, with marriage near, it doesn't mean so much after all.

"I'll toss it away," she said, "if Jackie wants me to."

Missing Dorchester Woman Sought

A search was started today for Mrs. Elizabeth V. Spalding, 43, of Buttonwood street, Dorchester, reported missing since yesterday afternoon.

The woman's daughter-in-law, Mrs. Mary Spalding, reported her disappearance to police of the South Boston station.

Police revealed that a postcard had been received at the Spalding home from a T. F. McNulty of Kingston, Jamaica, B. W. I., which stated he had found a pocketbook belonging to the missing woman and Leverett pond on the Jamaica-way.

Police of the Jamaica Plain station today declared the case had as yet not been reported to them but that they would investigate.

According to police, Mrs. Spalding had been despondent since a year ago when her son was killed in an auto accident.

Light Bulb Fires Crib, Killing Baby

Wilmington, Del., Sept. 8 (AP)—Six-weeks-old Joanna Wheat died yesterday after an electric light bulb set fire to the bed clothes in her crib at the Delaware hospital. Dr. Robert O. Y. Warren said the bulb had been hung over the baby's bed by a nurse to supply heat to treat a skin infection on the baby's neck. A nurse discovered the bed in flames. The bulb had fallen into the crib.

James Roosevelt Looters Just Boys

Washington, Sept. 8 (AP)—Police said today that however the thieves who ransacked James Roosevelt's home over the weekend and stole several articles of jewelry were [illegible].

A first check-up showed that the thieves, who apparently entered the house through an unlocked window, took nothing beyond some masculine jewelry, including a watch given Roosevelt by his paternal grandfather.

A litter of empty whiskey and wine bottles, police said, indicated the reason for the robbery not being more thorough. Other valuables were undisturbed.

Roosevelt was with his father, the President, at Hyde Park, N. Y. The robbery was discovered yesterday afternoon by a butler on his return from a weekend holiday.

NEVER WANTS TO SEE MOTHER, CRIES GIRL

Salem, Sept. 8—In the midst of a tangled mass of confusion a pensive court today a mournful girl of 15 told her mother she never wanted to see her again.

The girl, Susan Hadley, was last heard living with a Marblehead family. To prove the separation of her parents she says, "I'll never see mother again."

"I haven't any thought of seeing her again. She left us when we were babies. I don't want to see her again."

While Susan answered questions Judge Wilfred Wood and Asher Alter, 13, sat with their father, Daniel W. Hadley of Gloucester, World War veteran and government pensioner.

SENT CLOTHES BACK

Alter leaped to his feet when counsel for his mother, Mrs. Julia C. Hadley of Boston, asked Susan whether Mrs. Hadley had sent the children boxes of clothing. The younger boy snapped:

"We sent them right back, unopened. We don't know what was in them."

The proceeding was a two-fold hearing before Judge Edward B. O'Brien, who denied the husband's application for a divorce and told counsel for Mrs. Hadley to withdraw her application for separate support so the judge would help that also.

COUNTER CHARGES

The judge said he was confronted with a "cross situation."

"If I grant the husband a divorce," he explained, "the wife loses the $18 a month she receives from his pension."

Judge O'Brien said he was not impressed by either parent.

Gold Medal Awarded Dr. Carr

Honor Mt. Holyoke Chemistry Head

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 8 (AP)—A gold medal for a woman scientific genius was awarded today by the American Chemical Society to Dr. Emma P. Carr, head of the chemistry department of Mt. Holyoke College.

The award was the Francis P. Garvan gold medal and this is the first time it has been given. Dr. Carr got it for seeing what no other scientist had spied, the shapes of two of the molecules in gasoline.

The names of these molecules, the the award citation stated, are 2-butene and 2-pentene. Since most all the good or bad performances of gasoline is supposed to be connected with the shapes of its molecules, Dr. Carr's studies are of importance to petroleum chemists.

She was born at Huntersville, O. lived in Cooperstie, O., attended Ohio State and Chicago universities and Mt. Holyoke. In 1915 she became head of the chemistry department at Mt. Holyoke.

Her research work has received financial support from the National Research Council and the Rockefeller Foundation. Mt. Carr now is en route to Australia on an educational mission.

Guarding "$3,000,000" in Bonds

Under escort of 20 state troopers on motorcycles and carrying $3,000,000 in bonds, Governor Lloyd C. Stark of Missouri motored from Falmouth to Boston today, revealing on arrival the bonds were worthless.

The errand of the Missouri governor, accompanied by his aide was surrounded by mystery until he arrived at South Station where reporters pressed him for an explanation.

Word of his trip here had been sent over the police network of the state police.

"These bonds are not worth a nickel, Governor Stark declared, because I haven't signed them. What's all the excitement about?"

The Missouri chief executive explained the bonds were for WPA and state funds for the erection of federal post office buildings.

He said they had been sent him to be signed by Missouri Secretary of State Dwight Brown, who did not know how long the governor would be away on vacation.

Governor Stark soon received another communication from Brown stating he was unable to endorse the bonds had to be signed in Missouri.

He declared that he was taking them here since he intended they had to be signed before September 15. The bonds were carried in a stronghox which the governor revealed was locked to Fred Ayer, Massachusetts state governor and his state police escort were met in Boston officials and it plan [illegible]

JUSTICE TO ALL

DEWING NAMES BARTOLINI AS KILLER

tamin Dennis, Boston dentist, who identified the teeth as those of the victim.

Other witnesses by District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing, in charge of the prosecution, Mrs. Murphy, friend of the slain widow for 18 years, admitted under cross-examination by Defense Attorney George Lennie that Mrs. Asquith drank liquor occasionally.

LYONS MYSTERY

With a handkerchief in one hand, Bartolini, alleged to have slain the blonde former shoe model in her Weymouth cottage last September, showed only brief flashes of nervousness as Dewing made his opening address.

To the jurors, the prosecutor declared, he would prove that Bartolini killed the Weymouth merry widow because he decided that he and no one else should have her.

The district attorney also asserted that "we cannot establish that John A. Lyons ever left that house."

Lyons, World War veteran who lived at Slough street, Black Hay, was a suitor of the blonde widow, but has not been seen since the date of the slaying in September a year ago.

After Attorney Dewing's opening in the Suffolk Superior Court, during which Bartolini took his notes, unconcerned, duties at his side with handkerchief, he gave close heed to the prosecutor's address.

"We are here to find the truth and that is all any of us can ask," said the prosecutor.

"I am convinced that when you have completed your task, you will be convinced that the government has proved, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the defendant, Oscar Bartolini, is the murderer of Grayce Asquith and that the crime occurred September 20, 1936.

ALL CIRCUMSTANTIAL

"This case is going to take a good deal of time to try and it will take a great many witnesses. Like many other serious crimes it was not committed in public. We have no witnesses who saw the crime committed and so we must rely upon circumstantial evidence.

"Every day of your lives you are making decisions based upon circumstantial evidence.

"Evidence will be introduced to show that on October 3, last, two keys were found a few hours apart in Boston harbor. The persons who found those keys, which were wrapped up, will be here as witnesses.

"The head was found on October 24, last, also in Boston harbor. The persons who found the head will be here as witnesses.

WRAPPINGS IMPORTANT

"Dr. William J. Brickley, who viewed the remains, will be here as a witness and will identify the wrappings, which will be shown to you because they are of great importance in this case.

"We will establish that a murder was committed and that the victim was Grayce Asquith. Dr. Brickley (Suffolk County medical examiner) will tell you how Grayce Asquith met her death. He will tell of blows rained upon her head—not one, but many—which leads to the conclusion that a premeditated murder, a first degree murder, occurred.

"We will show that because of the forcefulness of the blows it was an atrocious crime.

"Then comes the question of who committed the murder. Witnesses will describe what they saw when they got to Grayce Asquith's house.

"Another witness will tell you of the windows being opened. Police will tell of gaining entrance to the cottage and what they saw.

SCIENCE AS WITNESS

"They will tell you what was on the table—glasses and a whiskey bottle. Through the aid of science we can tell you who was there and who sat at that table.

"Through the aid of science we will show you that Grayce Asquith, John A. Lyons and Oscar Bartolini drank from the glasses. We will show you that there were three setups on the table."

Dewing said Bartolini and Mrs. Asquith were "more than casual friends" and that Bartolini had been a frequent visitor at the cottage on Pleasant street.

"He had known Grayce Asquith for some time," said Dewing. "He became acquainted with her through a friend.

"The Commonwealth has no brief for the morals of Grayce Asquith. She had a right to live. She knew a number of men who visited that cottage.

ALL FOR HIMSELF

"Bartolini's acquaintance developed so that he became something more than a choreman. We will show you that, warmed with liquor, this defendant decided that no one should have her but himself.

"A short time before the murder took place, we will show you an incident that a person in a nearby cottage witnessed, one that took place between the defendant and Grayce Asquith. The witness is a woman.

"We will leave it to her to tell you what she saw, to show you the attitude of Bartolini and Grayce Asquith toward each other.

"Three other witnesses will tell you of another incident in the Asquith cottage a few weeks previously, in which Grayce Asquith and Bartolini were the chief actors.

"This evidence will include not only what those persons saw and heard, but statements made by the defendant.

NOT "PERFECT CRIME"

"We will show you beyond a reasonable doubt the kind of man that Bartolini was and that he was capable of doing this crime.

"The government will show that the defendant walked upon the blood in the bathroom in his bare feet.

"You can't commit a perfect crime and we will show you that in this case a perfect crime was not committed.

"We will show you that Oscar Bartolini was in that house after the crime was committed and that he walked in the blood of Grayce Asquith.

"And we will show you that the burlap in which the head was wrapped came from Oscar Bartolini."

Called as first witnesses William Tortorici and Patrick Kane, laborers at Boston airport, told of finding the legs at different times in Boston harbor.

Patrolman Daniel Doyle of the harbor police testified that he aided in taking from the harbor at Commercial bridge the plain woman's handle-wrapped head.

Pieces of burlap, green curtain and twine were entered as exhibits and testimony was given that the body parts had been wrapped in these articles.

Corroborating evidence as to the finding of the body parts was also given by two other harbor police, Lieutenant Lawrence H. Dunn and Patrolman John J. Smith.

GOVERNOR BARES THREATS IN R. I. RACING WAR

marked in Rhode Island and Grand Central Station, N. Y.

MINCES NO WORDS

Before a group of newspapermen in his office in the State House, Governor Quinn, usually calm and slow in speech during his past interviews, today was brisk and spoke quickly—appearing very much in a hurry to get down to his day's business.

But he minced no words in talking about the Rhode Island racing baron.

"O'Hara has called every public office holder and every man of standing in the State of Rhode Island the most vile and indecent name he could lay his tongue to," the governor declared.

The chief executive, in telling about the letters, added that he had also received many notes of commendation for his part in the battle of Gansett.

"From what I received and heard," he said, "I would say the public was 90 per cent behind us."

IRREGULARITIES HINT

He said that he had received one letter from a horseman, who complained of irregularities at the Gansett race track.

Asked if his attitude on the controversy had changed in the last 24 hours, Governor Quinn replied:

"It has not and it never will."

Concerning reports that he had been approached in the past 36 hours by someone in effort to compromise, the governor told the reporters:

"I could tell, but I won't. It would be divulging a confidence."

The reports heard in this city were that O'Hara would get out as track mogul if he was allowed to name his successor.

It was also reported that the governor had refused to consider any such proposal tonight.

"You have said that clean, honest racing is an issue in this fight and that the people of Rhode Island are against O'Hara. Are you going to show this?" a newspaperman asked the governor.

"We're going to accommodate him," came the brief reply.

SILENT ON PLANS

When a reporter again asked if we are going to use police what his "vague reference" meant, Governor Quinn answered:

"The public will know all about that very soon."

The governor refused to divulge what the plans were but indicated that would be action taken by the state racing commission.

He flatly refused to say whether this meant the cancelling of the track's license and suspension of dates for the remaining racing days.

O'Hara was seated in an office Friday, the racing commission so charges that he incinerated State Steward James A. Dooley when, from a window, he was photographed in a photo-finish race with three horses across the finishing line.

CHARGES "SLIGHT"

It was pointed out by persons close to the Governor, however, that the charge is slight ground for withdrawing the track's commission and that more substantial charges must be found if the commission is to be cancelled by the courts.

It was earlier today that Quinn made the statement to reporters that he and not O'Hara would run the track if the racing commission upheld the latter's license. When asked if he would do this, the governor said he would do something of the day before, Quinn stated.

"I do not think he will be the one to close it."

Pressed for amplification of his private remarks, Quinn said:

"I do not need to amplify it. You will see amplification of that very soon—probably within 48 hours."

The governor then asserted that his surprise move would be of great importance in the fight for the control of the state's lucrative political control of the state.

He asserted that the Supreme Court decision in the Narragansett case stating that the issue was one "between O'Hara and the honest people of the state."

WAIT O'HARA NEW MOVE

However, it was said authoritatively that O'Hara would continue his fight in the United States Supreme Court to protect his property rights in the matter and presented meetings at Exeter, several head of the track he built.

Observers looked toward his lavish penthouse at the track for the next move in the bitter battle.

Meanwhile the governor and his closest advisers, including several members of the racing commission, were closeted in his offices at the conference, which began at an early hour.

"CRISIS MEETING"

It was reported that this was the "crisis meeting" called to lay final plans for the enforcement of Quinn's dictum that racing in Rhode Island is finished if O'Hara does not quit.

Arriving at the State House, the Governor admitted with serious mien that there was an "important development," but refused to amplify the statement.

However, from sources close to him it was learned that the threat to close the track was not an idle one.

Reporters hurled a barrage of questions at the chief executive as he entered the building. Asked what his plan would be, he responded:

"I contemplate definite action of major importance. In what I propose to do there can be no compromise.

"The action of the court yesterday in granting O'Hara a writ of certiorari does not mean a thing as far as the State of Rhode Island is concerned. O'Hara is out."

In reply to a question asking whether the battle had resolved into a personal finish fight between him and the ousted manager, Quinn asserted:

"Oh, no. Not that. I wouldn't dignify O'Hara by saying that it was either O'Hara or me. You can say that as far as I am concerned in this thing the personal matter has nothing to do with it.

"This is a question that involves the people of the State of Rhode Island."

He was asked what the procedure to close the track would be if such action is taken. At this point, Francis J. Kiernan, chairman of the racing commission, interposed:

"We would, of course, advise the association and give proper notice, so they could prepare for it."

He said the notice would not be served upon O'Hara, but sent to the Narragansett Racing Association because "we do not recognize O'Hara as the president and manager."

The governor declared the commission by a majority vote could order suspension of activities at the track, which is scheduled to continue its present meeting until September 18.

Although O'Hara would not be given the right to appeal because the state considers him ousted, Kiernan said the association would have the right to ask a public hearing on the question.

As for O'Hara's defiant challenge that the state show any wrong act he has committed, the governor answered grimly as he walked from his office:

"We are going to try to accommodate him."

Earlier today after the Supreme Court had granted the review plea, the anti-O'Hara forces struck another blow when the accounts of the racing association in a Providence bank were threatened with attachment.

The threat was made by John J. Orr, grain contractor and allegedly a close friend of Quinn, who said he had instructed his attorneys to tie up the funds because of an alleged breach of contract.

On attempted count and a new court to equity was said to be the next step, and said that immediately after the motion fight was begun the forces were ordered to withdraw to the track where they attempted to deliver the supplies. He declared he was authorized by the forces to the park Saturday.

O'HARA SUES

Meanwhile, O'Hara, like Achilles before Troy, stayed in his palatial home apartment in the clubhouse building and refused to be interviewed.

There were frequent signs of activity, however, and it was evident that he too was planning to carry on the fight. Attorneys visited him on numerous occasions during the night.

Informed circles that night predicted Judge James E. Dooley as the administration choice for the post of steward and managing director of the racing association, if O'Hara is forced out and the track kept open.

ident to murder in connection with the shooting.

The blood sample of another fellow officer was tapped by Newton hospital doctors today in their efforts to save Patrolman Murray, who has been given only 24 hours to live. The blood donor was Patrolman Edward H. Maguire.

POLICE TESTIFY

It was learned today that Captain Richard J. Hood of the Newton police visited the wounded officer last night in company of a stenographer. He refused to say whether a statement had been taken.

Witnesses were presented to the Grand Jury today by District Attorney Warren L. Bishop and Assistant District Attorney William G. Andrew.

The grand jury was convened after a conference between Bishop and Newton and Watertown police. The first three witnesses called were Lieutenant Inspector Daniel J. O'Connell, attached to the district attorney's office; Inspector William Maihall of Watertown, and Sergeant James Igoe, also of Watertown.

Among those waiting to be called were Captain Charles Chamburgh, state ballistics expert, who identified a bullet taken from the neck of Simpson as having been fired from Murphy's gun, and several other policemen.

FAIL TO CALL GIRL

It was not expected Frances W. Frada, Cambridge "pick up" girl companion of Simpson, would be called.

Nor could it be learned whether the prosecutor would seek indictments against John J. Keating, Michael Addison or Edward J. Black, now held as accessories after the murder.

Also held in connection with the inquiry is Mrs. Alice Noone, Cambridge waitress, who was booked as a material witness.

Meanwhile, it was announced today that the city council committee on prisons would visit Charles street jail tomorrow to examine the cell from which Simpson escaped.

COUNCIL HEARING

The inspection will be made at 11 a. m. according to City Councilor George A. Murray.

The escape will be described at a hearing in the council chamber at 2 p. m., when police reports of the alleged gunman's flight from justice will be scrutinized.

'Lowdown' from High-ups

GOVERNOR QUINN RACING COMM. KIERNAN JAMES J. DELANEY

Here is James J. Delaney, Boston Evening American staff reporter, getting the official "lowdown" on the Narragansett racing situation from Governor Robert E. Quinn of Rhode Island and Racing Commissioner Francis J. Kiernan. The governor repeated his threat to close the Gansett track if Walter E. O'Hara continues to refuse to relinquish its management.

His first appointment in Rhode Island was to the Massachusetts Metropolitan District Commission. Rhode Island is now entitled to the Massachusetts appointment, but Governor Quinn has quietly let it be known that he would have to have assurances before going to court.

Judge Peter F. Gannon dismissed the case without costs on agreement of Attorney General Paul A. Dever, representing Governor Quinn, Racing Association, and Attorney General Hartigan.

REMAINS KING

Be that as it may, O'Hara still has state track and packed the house at a recent meeting. Daily he has been a frequent visitor at the clubhouse at Narragansett Park, and has been seen with a number of his associates.

Whether the executive will have to wage another campaign to keep his job remains to be seen. Many believe that he has already won the battle when he had built up such a following. Others say that the governor will have to wage another campaign to keep his job.

SIMMER GOES ON

Time, the great healer, seemed to have reduced the hot air blasts which had been issuing from the executive chamber to a gentle simmering, was still going on.

Whether the executive was really going to keep his job remains a matter of guessing. The problem appears to be one of politics, with the governor having the power to make the decision. The governor has refused to comment on the situation, and has made no statements since the battle began.

TIMILTY URGES MERIT BASIS IN POLICE TESTS

Police Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty today asked the Civil Service Commission to provide a merit rating basis that will reward police officers who do meritorious work, as well as those who attain a good rating on examinations.

Describing the present method for rating examination papers as "inadequate and discouraging," the commissioner struck out for some equitable system of rating efforts of those officers that will provide an "incentive" for good work.

He declared this is necessary to curb the discontent that has been apparent in the ranks of the police department.

INCENTIVE LACKING

"There is no incentive at present for officers to extend themselves to do meritorious work," he declared. "Although I am always alert for opportunities to commend the workers, that is poor reward indeed for unusual diligence."

In his statement addressed to Civil Service Commissioner Thomas H. Greer, Timilty also asked that credits be given a police officer who has done meritorious work, as a result of which he has made an arrest.

A review of the whole method of rating examinations is urged, he states.

"WORKER" PENALIZED

Special officers and detectives who make some fine arrest, and spend more time in court, frequently cannot do their own time to take the examination for sergeant, and thereby actually lose ground by studying for hours and then not getting a promotion.

"Instead of being rewarded for working, they are actually being penalized by having some of their own time taken away from them," he stated.

"I have noted in the past that police officers who have made arrests which would entitle them to credits for promotion have had the time and opportunity to study for the examination taken away from them because of the fact that they were engaged in the performance of their duty."

"I want to congratulate you on what you have just done."

Timilty's letter to Greer is in addition to the strong stand he has expressed when such a stand was necessary in connection with the CIO union of the police and the Sheriff's department.

EXTRA SESSION DEPENDS ON TRIP IN WEST

By GEORGE DURNO
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 8—Some time after President Roosevelt has started on his projected swing to the Pacific Coast, Congress will learn whether a special session is to be called for crop control and hour-wage legislation, sources close to the Summer White House indicated today.

The President's Western trip and special session prospects pictured in a considerable degree. If Mr. Roosevelt finds popular sentiment to be what he thinks it is, chances loomed strong that Congress would be back at work in November.

In trekking to Seattle to visit his daughter Mrs. Anna Boettiger and the grandchildren late this month, he could not seek mass reaction by addressing large rallies, it was said.

FEEL NATION'S PULSE

Rather, he will feel the nation's pulse through raw platform appearances and conferences with the notable chain of state, county and local leaders who always board a cross-country presidential train for a few days' ride.

It was expected Mr. Roosevelt would go west by the northern route and return by a southerly one, thus getting him in personal touch with a large cross-section of the nation's voters.

He probably will visit the Fort Peck, Roosevelt and Grand Coulee projects and spend a day in one of the national parks on the way home.

RIVER TRIP TODAY

Through the industrial central states, the President chose for relaxation for his wash hour program. The cruise and what he'll get from him an idea of the demand for crop control.

The President planned an excursion for relatives and neighbors up the Hudson this afternoon. At noon the yacht Nourmahal was to head up stream toward Kingston, and the party was not expected back until evening.

Mrs. Roosevelt was in New York meeting John, the youngest son, just returned from Europe—where he got into a controversy with the Mayor of Cannes as to who threw champagne into the mayor's face.

INTO THE COLD, CRUEL WORLD

Oh, give me a home
Where de cops never roam,
And de mulligan stew lures de bo;
For I'm now on de lam—
Did dem cops holler: "Scram!"
So back to de jungles I'll go.

Let me loaf by a stream
'Neath de sun's ticklin' gleam,
Where de boids warble sassy and sweet,
Dere I'll build me a nest,
Get some much-needed rest,
For dese corns keep a-hotin' me feet.

43 REFUGEES MOVE OUT OF SHANTYTOWN

Forty-three ragged refugees from Dorchester's shantytown on the marshes of Mile Road, wandered aimlessly through the streets of Boston today, seeking some place to start over again.

Their hovel homes destroyed, their means of livelihood in digging junk from the city dump gone under orders of the court not to return to the scene, the refugees sought makeshift ways of earning a living.

40 SHACKS RAZED

Forty shacks, constructed of boxes, sheets of tin and iron, and panes of glass, built from the rude materials of the junk pile by the near-indigent shantytown men, were scrubbed.

Protests to Captain James T. Sheehan of the Fields Corner police station failed to halt the destruction of the camp town.

Many of the dispossessed men slept last night on park benches on Boston Common. Others shifted to alley boxes while some took to the open road, to seek a more hospitable refuge than Dorchester's dump proved.

"GOTTA BEG NOW"

"Now we've got to ask people for money and food again, and may get six months for doing it," complained one of the fugitives, James Whitaker.

"Out in camp we earned $4 to $5 a week, getting by all right and bothering nobody," he added.

"If they wanted the camp healthy, why not give us a chance to clean it up first, instead of tearing everything to pieces? And where am I going to get another job?"

Boston Carriers' Delegation Best

Kansas City, Sept. 8 (AP)—The following award was announced today at the annual convention of the National Association of Letter Carriers:

Most outstanding delegation, men or women: Massachusetts.

STRAW VOTING GIVES TOBIN EARLY LEAD

large vote on election day, November 2.

Returns for Brett seem to indicate that the Social Justice movement is not the dead issue many political observers contend it is.

VOTE ON HIGH PLANE

The present mayoralty straw vote balloting will be conducted on the same high plane as in the past. Honest reports will be published daily.

Readers of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser will be given the same unbiased accounts of the straw balloting as were given in 1933 when tabulations of these newspapers clearly indicated that the present Mayor of Boston, Frederick W. Mansfield was leading the field.

All subscribers to these newspapers are urged to avail themselves of this opportunity to record their views in favor of the election of their own mayoralty candidate. Their vote will be recorded by these newspapers and properly credited to their favorite.

As a result of the interest taken by friends of United States Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., and at the time Charles F. Hurley in the 1926 straw ballot voting conducted by these newspapers it was possible to indicate a landslide victory for Lodge weeks in advance of the election and to predict a Hurley victory several weeks before the cash was counted.

The fund of mayoralty candidates was further increased last night when Charles H. Hyde of Mount Vernon street, Back Bay, one of the best known Democrats of that section, withdrew from the united and announced his support of former Governor James M. Curley who is now seeking a fourth term at City Hall.

Ex-Governor Curley, Councilor Robert Gardner Wilson, Jr., and Daniel J. Lyons, both of Dorchester, had withdrawn as a result of the withdrawal of Mr. Hyde there are now only 14 candidates and of these Hon. Henry Parkman of Chestnut Hill and Representative Francis X. Coyne of Dorchester have not announced here today.

MANY 'DEALERS' PLAN TO QUIT

Washington, Sept. 8 (INS)—An exodus of some of the most important of the New Deal's key men was predicted today following the announcement that President Roosevelt had accepted the resignation of Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor.

As President Roosevelt announced acceptance of McGrady's resignation, it was learned likely M. Landis will retire as chairman of the securities and exchange commission September 20 to become dean of the Harvard law school.

Undersecretary of the Interior Charles West, former representative from Ohio, who was defeated for the Senate by Senator Vic Donahey, plans to run for governor of Ohio against Martin L. Davey.

James M. Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee has indicated to friends that he will resign as Postmaster General, to become an official of the Pierce-Arrow Automobile Company, in the near future, Stephen Early, ace of the President's secretarial staff, has been offered a very attractive position with a nationwide advertising concern in New York.

Harvard Scientist Finds Gravity Clue in Milky Way

Discovery of the structure of the milky way and a new type of subsystem in the universe, in which one gigantic cluster of stars revolves about an even more massive group, was disclosed today by James Coffey, Harvard astronomer.

The study, which showed that one star grouping of suns swing about another, in much the same manner as the moon travels about the earth, was said by scientists to have contributed important clues to the structure of the great aggregation of stars familiarly known as the milky way.

Coffey's conclusions were the result of very accurate determination of the distances from the sun of nine milky way star clusters in the constellation Aquarius.

Commenting on Coffey's discovery scientists said:

"It is the first positive indication scientists have had that these vast groupings of suns may be connected with one another by gravity, forming independent sub-orders within the galaxy."

Lord Montagu Wed To London Actress

London, Sept. 8 (INS)—Lord Edward Montagu, adventure-loving son of the Duke of Manchester, was honeymooning today in Cornwall with his bride, the former Dorothy Peters, London actress and theatrical producer.

Montagu, whose mother, first Duchess of Manchester, was Helena Zimmerman of Cincinnati, was formerly married to Norah Potter of Edmonton, Alberta, who obtained a divorce. He returned to England two years ago after spending a number of years in western Canada and California.

38 Coast Guard Stations Closed

Washington, Sept. 8 (AP)—Coast Guard headquarters announced today 38 stations on the Atlantic coast from New Hampshire to North Carolina have been eliminated for "efficiency and economy."

Stations placed on the inactive list since Sept. 1 include:

New Hampshire—Wallis Sands and Rye Beach; Massachusetts—Peaked Hill Bar and Pamet River; Rhode Island—Narragansett, Quonnonontaug and New Shoreham.

Too Costly To Die

Nottingham, Eng., Sept. 8 (AP)—The British government was asked today to make it cheaper for a person to die.

Herman Levy, exiled German who is one of Great Britain's leading economists, told the British Association for the Advancement of Science that "the high cost of dying is exorbitant and should be controlled by the state."

Under present conditions he said "a man must have 20 or 25 pounds (about $100 or $125) in order to consider dying."

HONOR BISHOP SPELLMAN ON ANNIVERSARY

The Most Reverend Francis J. Spellman, today celebrated his fifth year as auxiliary bishop of Boston and titular Bishop of Sila.

Three distinguished visitors, the Most Reverend Bishop Joseph H. Ryan of Omaha, Monsignor Alfred Orsenigo of the holy office and Monsignor Primo Principe, attache of the office of the Papal Secretary of State, celebrated three solemn high masses at the Sacred Heart Church, Newton Center, in commemoration.

In 1932 Bishop Spellman was consecrated by Cardinal Pacelli in St. Peter's in Rome, in reward for distinguished service in the office of Secretary of State where he had served for several years. His original appointment came as the result of recommendations by Cardinal O'Connell.

Before that time he had served for two years as North American College at Rome after his graduation from Fordham University in 1911. Ordained in Rome he returned to Boston, remaining here until 1925.

He was the first American bishop to be consecrated at St. Peter's. His appointment as auxiliary bishop was made at the time of the transfer of the Most Rev. John Bonzano, Delegate to Manchester, N. H., as Papal Nuncio to Cuba.

SOON TO BE BRIDE

Miss Sylvia Collamore Hatch, Winchester tennis star, shown here in action, will soon be the bride of Courtlandt Ryder Campbell, Tech graduate and rising young engineer, her parents have just announced. Miss Hatch won New England honors in the William Randolph Hearst national tennis tournament.

Wilder Finds Art Job 'Missing'

Paul Wilder of Brimfield, dean of the Massachusetts School of Art for the past 28 years, who was transferred to another post at his own request, today had to do without a dean.

State Commissioner of Education James G. Hamilton announced Wilder is to serve with the education department and that there will be no successor to him in the training center here.

Wilder was transferred to the post at his own request, it was said, as a climax to a long controversy with President C. Edward Newell of the school.

He was appointed by state supervisors of art a year ago, his term to exceed for 15 years. The advisory board of the school was abolished and that the post be recreated, but action was taken at the last session of the legislature.

At the time of the transfer Commissioner Hamilton said Wilder would receive a "substantial salary" but no appropriation has been made.

Hurley Acts Soon On Fugitive's Case

A decision on the request of Governor Fred H. Cone of Florida for rendition of Thomas Hurley from the Florida state prison will be made soon, Governor Hurley announced today.

Action on the Florida governor's request for return of the fugitive has been delayed for a week as a result of the serious illness of the governor's daughter.

Hill is held in Charlestown state jail pending Governor Hurley's decision.

Catholic Telegraph Merged in Chain

The Catholic Telegraph, oldest Catholic journal in the United States, founded in 1831 as the organ of the Cincinnati archdiocese and will be the official organ of the Paterson diocese.

The paper will become part of a chain of 13 weekly Catholic diocesan newspapers controlled by Denver Register. Dr. Thomas F. Hart, editor of the Telegraph for nearly 40 years, will retire.

Mad Hatters, These Conn. Women

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 8 (AP)—Miss Mary Murphy of Danbury, hat manufacturing center, told delegates to the Connecticut Federation of Labor convention today that there were too many hatheads, particularly among men, to suit her and her fellow workers in the hatting industry.

The practice of going bareheaded, she said, was reducing the number of jobs.

She expressed the hope that the days of the "hatless man" will soon be over.

Court Moves Out to Try Cripple

In an unprecedented move, a crippled defendant's operation of a motor truck was ordered to attend a hearing outside Quincy court today, charged with violation of three motor laws.

Hyman Shaw, 37, of Hartford avenue, Quincy, paralyzed from his knees down, was arrested on a charge of driving a 21-passenger Packard bus on Washington street, Boston, without a license. Shaw is employed by Metropolitan Transit Co. of Quincy.

When he did not appear for trial, Judge James Mahoney issued a warrant for his arrest. Lieut. Frank Lane sent the driver's car and bed went there.

Shaw pleaded guilty and charges of operating without a license and operating to endanger were passed on file.

He was given a suspended 1-day jail sentence and fined $10 on each count, on a charge of operating a motor vehicle without insurance. He paid the fourth fine and sentence was suspended indefinitely. Shaw said he did not know it was required and didn't know it was expired.

Plans to look him home in the future.

Party Flies to See N. Y. Preview

Seventeen critics and theater managers were flown from Boston to New York in a chartered plane to see "Boom" performances.

The party, comprising 16 newspaper representatives and managers of seven Loew theaters in New England, left East Boston airport at 11 a. m. aboard a 21-passenger flagship of American Air Lines.

In New York the group was to attend a preview of the film Broadway Melody of 1938, in the Capitol theater, and then the plane was to return tonight.

In charge of the party was Earl Wilson of Revere, manager of the Paul division of the Loew circuit.

Plans to show the picture aboard the plane were abandoned when the film failed to reach Boston in time to make the trip. It was sent by the manager of the theater showing the picture and was delivered in the nick of time.

Train Leaps Rails, Engineer Killed

New Haven, Inc., Sept. 8 (INS)—The engineer was killed and several other persons injured late last night when a Providence-to-New York express train jumped from the tracks near here.

Two other persons were injured. They are Thomas D. Ingraham, 21-year-old Harvard student of New York, and Dr. Forest Manire, Jr., 21, also New York.

The engine turned over and four of the six cars in the train were derailed but stayed upright.

Harvard Student Hurt as One Dies

Southampton, N. Y., Sept. 8 (AP)—William A. D. Blake, 21-year-old Yale student and actually resident of New York, his home, and at this Long Island resort, was dead in an emergency room here today of injuries received in an automobile accident.

Two other young men injured. They are D. C. Ingraham, 21-year-old Harvard student of New York, and Dr. Forest Manire, Jr., 21, also New York.

Find Auto Victim Lying in Street

Thomas Howley, 21, of Industrial street, Dorchester, was found dying unconscious in the street in front of the Dorchester court house today, and taken to City hospital.

Revived at the hospital, Howley told police he had been knocked down by an automobile.

Manhattan Sails As Labor Row Ends

New York, Sept. 8 (AP)—A labor struggle which threatened to bind the United States inter Manhattan at her dock was settled shortly before noon today, and the ship was granted clearance papers to depart, longshoremen's wage increases to go into effect.

Hero, 10, Rescues Drowning Boy, 2

Providence, R. I., Sept. 8 (AP)—Edward J. Blake, 10 years old, of Riverside, today rescued a two-year-old boy, Charles F. Brown, Jr., who fell into Pullen's cove there today. The child, taken from the water in an unconscious condition, was revived.

Rosenberg Backed By Young Voters

Benjamin Goberman, head of the committee of the Independent Voters' League, Ward 14, last night announced its endorsement of Sydney Rosenberg for re-election to the city council. The committee includes Benjamin Fischer, Max Ardler and Arnold Gravier, all from Roxbury.

Zimmy Has a Purpose--No Porpoise

New York, Sept. 8 (AP)—Zimmy, the legless merman, has a purpose—lacks a porpoise.

His purpose is to make a non-stop swim from Key West, Fla., to Havana, Cuba. He wants the porpoise to keep man-eating sharks from further abbreviating the Zimmy torso.

In case you can't remember, Charles Zimmy, 45, is the man who recently made a 115-mile non-stop swim from Albany to New York, powered by 300 cigars a bucket of hamburger and a bottle of brandy.

Zimmy feels the 85-mile ocean swim will be a cinch—if he can locate a healthy adult porpoise. It seems sharks have an inferiority complex in the presence of porpoises.

"Even the smell of a porpoise will scare sharks away," Zimmy said.

LABOR BOARD 2 CAPITAL BOUND

Chairman Michael F. Phelan and Kenneth I. Taylor of the newly created State Labor Relations Board left for Washington today where they will confer with the National Labor Relations Board.

The local commission members will also confer with the New York board before their return to Boston next week.

Patrick J. Sullivan, third member of the board, remained at the State House to continue work of organizing commission enforcement.

Daniel A. Buckley of Cambridge is expected to be named as secretary of the commission next week. Buckley's appointment will be submitted to the Governor's Council on Wednesday for confirmation of its salary only. Confirmation of the appointment by the council is unnecessary.

College Girl Confesses Slaying Father of 2

Woodridge, N. J., Sept. 8—Pretty 20-year-old Margaret Drennan, a college student, today confessed that she shot and killed Paul Reeves, 28, father of two children, when he tried to attack her in the kitchen of his home, police said.

Authorities said the girl sobbed:

"He grabbed me as I tried to run out of te kitchen door. I got the gun out of my bag and fired twice."

Five feet three inches tall, shapely and pretty, she radiated confidence at her arraignment a short time later before Police Recorder Arthur Brown.

HELD WITHOUT BAIL.

Charged with murder, she entered a formal plea of innocent and was held without bail for grand jury action.

Her father and mother wept during the brief proceedings, but the girl consoled them. She told her attorney she was sure she would be cleared.

After an all night grilling, the girl first admitted that she went to Reeves' home at Nearby Iselin "because he got me in trouble who h attacked m four years ago." She added that Reeves arranged the rendezvous by sending his wife Myra to the movies.

Police quoted Miss Drennan:

"When I reached his house I walked in the front door. He was standing in the living room, nude.

TELLS OF STRUGGLE

"I had brought the gun along because I feared he might attack me again. When I saw him standing there I got scared. I started to run out the back door. I knew he couldn't chase me outside because he wasn't dressed.

"But in the kitchen he overtook me and grabbed me. I struggled. Somehow I managed to get the gun out of my bag. In the fight, the gun went off. The first bullet hit him in the foot. Then the second shot rang out, and he fell to the floor."

That bullet pierced his heart. Reeves died in a Perth Amboy hospital in the arms of his wife. The gun, with two cartridges fired, was found in the Drennan home.

Painter Dies

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 8 (AP)—Mrs. Ida Pulie Lathrop, about 70, Albany's dean of women painters, was dead at her home here today. Mrs. Lathrop's works have been exhibited in museums in New York City, Pittsfield, Mass., and Washington, D. C.

DISTASIOS SEEK NEW RESPITE

Counsel for Frank and Anthony Di Stasio, now awaiting death in the electric chair the week of September 12, today appealed to Governor Hurley to grant the doomed father and son a respite until early November, pending action of the United States and Massachusetts supreme courts on appeals he has before those bodies.

Two months ago Governor Hurley granted Frank Di Stasio, the father, a respite until the week of September 12, on a previous plea by counsel.

Governor Hurley refused to make any comment after conferring with counsel for the two condemned men.

He is expected to make known his decision on the plea later today.

Falls 25 Feet Off Ladder

Henry Ash, 49 of Mitchwam road, Woburn, repair man for the Boston and Maine railroad, sustained a fractured right elbow and hip today and a possible concussion when he fell 25 feet from a ladder.

State Legion to Install

Raymond R. McAvoy of Stoughton, will be installed as state commander of the Massachusetts American Legion at a colorful ceremony Friday evening at Hotel Statler.

Governor Hurley, the first Legionnaire to become chief executive of the Bay State, will be the principal speaker. Mayor Mansfield has accepted an invitation to be present.

Five state vice-commanders and minor elective officers will also be installed at the same time. The Arlington Post Band and Watertown Post drill team, champions in their respective fields, will furnish music and escorts for the various officers and invited guests.

Rev. Kirby Webster, retiring department chaplain, will pronounce the invocation.

Dancing will follow the installation program. Thomas Quinn, of Cambridge, and Mrs. Mary Galvin Hyrne are among the artists who will entertain.

Newspapers Tops for Ads

Loew's Executives Increase Lineage

Ninety per cent of all advertising by Loew's State and Orpheum theaters in Boston will be placed in newspapers during the coming year, the management announced today.

In addition, a general increase in advertising lineage over last fall has been announced here, based upon an unprecedented number of big picture releases scheduled here starting with "Broadway Melody of 1938," starring Robert Taylor and Eleanor Powell, beginning Friday.

Increases in newspaper advertising were announced here today by Oscar A. Dooh, advertising director for Loew's, who advised Division Manager H. M. Addison of the general increase.

"In my opinion, newspapers are still the most effective means of reaching the theater-going millions in America," Dooh stated.

A survey conducted by Loew's in 40 metropolitan cities during the past month indicates a striking increase in interest on the part of newspapers in motion pictures and local motion picture news.

More than 75 per cent of the papers in those cities were found to be devoting more space to motion picture news than they were a year ago.

"This increase in space devoted to movie news by the more progressive and alert publishers reflects an increase in interest on the part of newspaper readers," said Dooh. "A surprising number of newspapers are sending screen editors or feature writers to Hollywood several times a year. Others maintain Hollywood correspondents."

Miss Peggy Doyle, picture critic of the Boston Evening American, is now in Hollywood, reviewing new autumn cinema treats.

Wild Auto Wheel Kills Aged Man

Chelmsford Centre, Sept. 8—Joseph Houle, 78, retired farmer, lay dead here today, after being struck and fatally injured by an automobile wheel which had whirled off a passing car.

As he fell, his head hit the cement sidewalk. He died without regaining consciousness.

A technical manslaughter charge will be filed against Miss Ruth Walker, 34, of Lowell, driver of the car.

Rudy Vallee Hollywood Bound

Los Angeles, Sept. 8—One of the very first to wire Alice Faye and wish her and Tony Martin happiness after their elopement was Rudy Vallee.

Louella O. Parsons

And now Rudy's coming to Hollywood to do talkie or film bauble. He has an engagement at the Coconut Grove and while he is here the matter of that one picture at Fox he owes Warner Brothers will be taken up. If you don't tell a soul I am telling you, it's "Gold Diggers of 1938" that Hal Wallis has in mind for the famous crooner. Jerry Wald and Richard Macaulay have been put to work to get the script in readiness.

And I mustn't forget to tell you that five minutes after Alice and Tony eloped, Darryl Zanuck was planning to cast the happy bridegroom in Alice's next picture, "Sally, Irene and Mary." Showmanship, eh what?

The happiest boy in all Hollywood today was Allen Curtis, who was selected by Joan Crawford, after she had seen his test, for the second male role in "Mannequin." Joan says she really believes the boy has definite promise and it is interesting to hear her say that because Mrs. Lela Rogers (Ginger's ma) has been trying for months to get RKO to give him a break.

Mrs. Rogers must have felt today, when Joan Crawford was so enthusiastic, that her faith in the young man was justified. Spencer Tracy has the first lead — so you see it's a chance in a lifetime for young Curtis.

If I didn't know that Ina Claire must be considerably older than 28, I would have said she couldn't be a day over that when I saw her dancing around the Stork Club recently. Ina has gone back to New York after goodbyes against the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer deal. But she is listening now to an offer from Samuel Goldwyn to play Bill Arden in "You Can Be Beautiful." Well, Ina certainly can—and is beautiful. Whether or not she accepts the Goldwyn offer, she will probably do a play for either Max Gordon or Arthur Hornblow. Ina is also mentioned by Frederica Lonsdale as "Barchester Towers," an English drama.

Chatter in Hollywood: Hollywood's greatest bachelor, Howard Hughes, is terribly interested in Ginger Rogers' friend, Eleanor Powell, in Texas. There's no use in Ronnie, but this, my dears, is not an M-G-M publicity stunt for Eleanor. Hughes people know that Ronnie outside of studio hours has been going on Eleanor. She is also a swell gal and this matter interests her, they say, that the lovely Ina recently in Mrs. Sothern's big son and Romance in his means indifferent.

Line o' Type: Clara Bow is being tested by Milton Bren with a view to signing her for a Beach movie . . . Paulette Goddard signed a contract to make a test for Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind" before she left for New York. First time we ever heard of such a contract being made.

Charlie Chaplin is all pepped up over the talkie he plans to make and expects to get started before the first of the year . . . Leo Gorcey, whose "spit" in "Dead End" will get him parents of publicity, replaces Mickey Rooney in "Mannequin" with Joan Crawford . . . Louise Henry replaces Phyllis Brooks in "Second Honeymoon" and talk is that Phyllis was just a bottle temperamental.

BOSTON after DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Naturally if you didn't know what sort o' guy wouldn't recognize your self-portrait, but still you've wonders it a certain City Hall lad always will. . . The one who holds a Good Job given him by Mayor Mansfield, who owns considerable property here and there in the outlying sections and from whose desk the wolf is so far away that he can't even hear the door smacker than your Aunt Minnie's bullets. . . .

A few weeks ago a Boston policeman dropped dead leaving his widow with seven kids and another expected . . . He also left a number of bills unpaid, over and above what would in the circumstances be due on his regular salary . . . Well, prompted on September 15 the property owners in the block in which the family resided took up a collection for the widow and kids and in the course of a month or so of this date . . . the sum of $1,000 Mayor Mansfield became the owner of his department store, although he set a price on it, we don't know. . . .

MUSIC IN THE AIR

Probably the most self-effacing lad in Hollywood was as well as the youngest and one of the most successful, as Jack Cummings, a Boston Latin School product of years past . . . They thought Jack had reached the pinnacle when he unveiled his "Born to Dance" a year ago, with Eleanor Powell (the Springfield lass) but now the Cummings are for his latest M-G-M musical, "Broadway Melody of '38," opening Friday at the State and Orpheum here . . .

After Jack got through with Latin School, he was a cocky and somber lad . . . Then he went to Harvard and looked in as an office boy at the old Keith's on Mayor Stahlin . . . Now he's top man of the stage and has returned to the old home town with a flock of movieland royalty eating out his extended . . .

When a lad gets to the Top, he's usually a fancy set of ivory with Chesterfield Red Hair, man's height and the ability to tell a right good gag . . . Jack is Hollywood's brightest and one of its most expensive men on the free enjoyment . . . He's indebted to no one for what he is and were indebted to him . . . Ralph Cummings, Jack's father, is Director of Music of M-G-M—for the present . . .

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY

Pat and Peggy Joy, the dancing team, are back from Europe and after his shows end we'll be thinking of the Cummings-Joy-Hutton-Miranda . . . Is Fifi Dorsay still due to make the rounds here again, sans Tippet, the lamented dreamer, Tippet, who resided in the Hal Roach studio zoo? . . . Another Thumbs Down Sign . . . Paper Takes a Trip . . . Film will have approximately the same playdays . . . Sundays and holidays will only the two rainy Sabbath that each commissioner has to . . .

Mrs. Stella Crater (the missing N. Y. jurist's wife) back in Maine awaiting payment of his insurance cash . . . She's reported to have given up stage career dreams . . . Local listeners still wondering if Hardwood Hartley, he's the Jack Benny radio orch. leader, really meant it in that broadcast from the Texas fair, or if he was kidding . . . When, in introducing songster Leah Ray, he quoth Smiling, "And now she's been famous, too" . . . And when, later on, he said of Leah, "And now she's gone up the ladder, too" . . .

Row days for Benny and Sophie Tucker . . . Ole's husband is to get four shows together for Hot Mikado, including Handy's Girls, Mitchell Harris, Ina's the Jack Benny radio orch. leader, ready toward it as that broadcast from the Texas fair, or if he was kidding . . . When, in introducing songster Leah Ray, he quoth Smiling, "And now she's been famous, too" . . . And when, later on, he said of Leah, "And now she's gone up the ladder, too" . . .

Bob Hardy and Band (he was Ranny Weeks' mgr. before Ranny flitted to Hollywood and the screen-ings) booked into Commonwealth ave's El Marocco . . . Opening probably the 18th, with a preview Mon. . . . Incidentally, Ranny's new movieland stills make him look something like Robt. Taylor . . . Fay Conwell squawks to Mrs. Mildred Harris, present incumbent, stiffened with addition of Frank R. Hargrave, candidate's list in Roxbury's Ward 9 . . . Sis. of Gypsy Rose Lee (Louise Hovick in films) to be in Fay's company of the stager, "The Women" . . . Sis spells the family name Havick—with an "a" . . .

Bob newspaper lads welcome to the pigskin fold south Boston Joe O'Brien, son of John's the swellest coach that ever trod a footb'l or basketball field, a honest to God basketball coach for every track . . . Joe's a tabloid . . . His Dad only coach at English High, Latin Technical and at Georgetown, where he directed all athletics.

By LEO GAFFNEY

Endlessly there are plays about young people caught for the first time in the trap of love. And endlessly the public enjoys such plays, particularly if they're well authored, produced, performed.

The current addition is "Blow Ye Winds," written by Valentine Davies in his most facile style produced by Arthur Hopkins with his customary scrupulous attention, and performed—chiefly—by Henry Fonda, who is starred, and Doris Dalton, who is starred in support.

The premiere was last night at the Shubert, where the attraction is to remain for two weeks while it gets ready for Broadway. Whether Broadway will open its arms to Mr. Hopkins' latest production is a question.

Venturing a guess, you might say that Broadway will relent, for "Blow Ye Winds" has several qualities dear to the heart of the metropolis. For one thing, it is full of the speech of the moment, the crackling talk that pours from the pages of the "class" magazines and flows with the cigarette smoke over the best bars.

There are moments and morals to match that talk, too, the manners and morals of this new era of speed and the depression. Marking the hours, time the person feature with Eleanore Whitney have been teamed together with Johnny Downs, Benny Baker, a year, Loretta Young and Joe Terry Walker. Ed Brendel and Annette play the romantic role is Lynne Overman.

Mr. Fonda's performance was a surprise to many. On screen his playing tended at times toward the mechanical. In "Blow Ye Winds," as in his previous appearance here in "The Farmer Takes a Wife," all traces of the star's film acting vanish. It is a good straightforward performance, clear, reasoned, developed.

Miss Dalton, too, is happily cast. She has something for more in an exceptionally lengthy performance.

"Blow Ye Winds" needs and can stand some trimming of time. Then it should enjoy active favor with audiences ever on the alert for new and the smart.

WHEN LOVE GETS SEVERE TEST

Karen Morley and Roscoe Karns in a tense scene from "On Such a Night," a thrilling film based on a murder, a trial and an escape from the death house on execution night. It will come to the Paramount and the Fenway tomorrow.

Flood Drama Tops Twin Bills

"On Such a Night" Paramount's much anticipated drama of revenge, love and sacrifice, featuring Grant Richards, Karen Morley, Roscoe Karns and Eduardo Ciannelli, coupled with the latest Jane Withers comedy thriller, "Wild and Woolly," featuring Walter Brennan, Pauline Moore, Carl "Alfalfa" Switzer and Jack Searl, are the principal features on the Paramount and Fenway Theaters highly varied program opening tomorrow.

Set against the background of the recent Mississippi Valley floods, "On Such a Night" tells the story of an innocent man who calmly accepts a death sentence to protect the life of the woman he loves, and of a woman who sacrifices a brilliant career to be worthy of as great a love. Grant Richards, on trial for murder, convicts himself by maintaining a mysterious silence.

Karen Morley, wife of the condemned man and of famous surgeon in her own right, when life Grant hopes to protect by his silence, is engaged out of vengeance by Eduardo Ciannelli, gang leader, when she attempts to prove her husband's innocence.

Roscoe Karns, star crime reporter, convinced of Richard's innocence, and sensing a sensational story, turns his efforts towards aiding the prisoner. On the night of his execution, Richards makes a sensational escape through a raging Mississippi flood. In a spectacular climax, when the flood reaches its greatest height and it appears all are doomed, Ciannelli confesses to the murder for which Richards has been accused. A new trial is granted, Ciannelli is convicted and Richards and Miss Morley are happily reunited.

The feature attraction at the South Station Theater in the City, "Shanghai Bombed," in which actual scenes of the horror and despair that gripped the Chinese city are shown. This film ends tomorrow night.

Starting Friday the Louis-Farr fight pictures will be shown.

Met Offers Plenty of Music

"Varsity Show," Warner Brothers' spectacular screen musical starring Fred Waring and his famous orchestra, the Pennsylvanians, with Dick Powell and Ted Healey, will have its first Boston showing at the Metropolitan theater on Thursday.

Now England's popular bandleader, Mal Hallett, and his orchestra, assisted by the dance trio, Virginia Lee and the Lathrop Brothers, head the stage show. Included in the big cast of "Varsity Show," besides Waring, Powell and Healey, are such show world celebrities as Lee Dixon, Donald and Rosemary Lane, Johnny Hubbard, Walter Catlett, Johnny Davis, Posy McGuinness and Doy Atwell.

Fred Waring is said to outdo himself in "Varsity Show" with his responsive and lavish production numbers. Specialty numbers, too, are by Dick Whiting and Johnny Mercer, and they include "Have You Any Old Socks," "Love Is On the Air Tonight," "Old King Cole," "You've Got Something There," "We're Getting Along Fine Way Through College," "Moonlight On the Campus" and "On With the Show."

Briefly, the story concerns a Broadway producer temporarily on the rocks who goes to college and his efforts to stage the annual Quadrangle show at Winfield College, his alma mater. He has been ordered to return to Winfield to rescue the show from the hands of a temperamental faculty star who is all for art and short on swing. William Keighley, whose most recent picture was "The Prince and the Pauper," directed.

At the Bowdoin

Featured at the Bowdoin Theater today is "Exclusive," with Fred MacMurray and Frances Farmer and "The Big Shot," with Guy Kibbee in the leading role. The Louis-Farr fight pictures are also being shown.

Betty Alden on 'Beacon Hill'

Marjorie Nichols, Gertrude Coffin, Sophie Hunt Join Brides

By BETTY ALDEN

AN UNUSUAL AND ATTRACTIVE color scheme marked the wedding at which Miss Marjorie Nichols, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Nichols of West Newton, became the bride of Alexander Humphrey Beard of New York today . . .

The ceremony took place at one o'clock at the Algonquin Club on Commonwealth avenue with the Rev. Boynton Merrill of West Newton officiating . . . Mr. Nichols gave his daughter in marriage . . .

RUTH COFFIN

The bride's gown was fashioned of white faille silk with a short circular train and was clouded by a fingertip length tulle veil . . . She carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley . . .

The individual combination of blue faille, trimmed with burgundy velvet, fashioned the gowns of the two bridesmaids, the Misses Dorothy Joyce of Newton Center and Georgianne Dean of West Newton . . . They wore halo hats of burgundy velvet with circular tulle veils also of the burgundy shade and their bouquets were of African daisies and mahogany snapdragons . . .

Receiving with the bridal couple at the reception, which was also at the Algonquin Club, Mrs. Nichols was an attractive hostess in dubonnet velvet trimmed with dusty pink lace . . .

A. G. H. Reinold came on from Orange, New Jersey, to serve as best man and the Messrs. Henry Eames of Stamford, Ct., and Curtis Franklin of Mountain Lakes, N. J., were the ushers . . .

Following a wedding trip to Italy, Mr. Beard and his bride will live in New York . . . The bride is a graduate of House in the Pines School and Goucher College . . . Mr. Beard is the son of Mrs. James W. Beard of Larchmont, N. Y., and the late Mr. Beard . . . He is a graduate of Yale University and belongs to the Yale Club of New York and the Orange Lawn Tennis Club . . .

French-Hunt Ceremony in Weston

A LOVELY COLOR SCHEME also plays a prominent part in the wedding pageant this afternoon of Sophie Leverett Hunt of Lincoln and John R. P. Kendall Green in the First Parish Unitarian Church in Weston . . . for the bridesmaids are preceding the bride down the aisle are wearing gowns of yellow and sapphire blue chiffon with contrasting shades of flowers . . .

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Hunt of Lincoln and Southern Dutyell, N. Y., is being given away by her father, and the Rev. Dwight Bradley of Newton Center is assisting Rev. Miles Hanson of Weston in officiating . . . She is wearing her mother's wedding gown of ivory satin with a court train and fingertip veil . . . Her long tulle veil is also trimmed with rose point lace and orange blossoms and in place of a bouquet she is carrying an ivory prayer book with lily of the valley markers . . .

Miss Martha Hunt, sister of the bride, is maid of honor and wearing the corn color chiffon with a matching turban and a bouquet of two shades of blue delphinium . . . Her dress is made with a full skirt, puff sleeves, tailored collar and a row of tiny buttons down the front . . . The bridesmaids are the Misses Jeannette Brown of Weston, Illinois; Maryalis Morgan of Wilmington, Del.; Nancy Busher of Weston and Mrs. Frank L. Evoy of Watermain, Pa. . . . They are all wearing sapphire chiffon gowns with turbans to match and bouquets of yellow primulides, gladioli and deep blue delphinium . . .

The reception is being held at the home of the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John R. P. French of Kendall Green . . . Mrs. Hunt is wearing a gown of gray lace and the bridegroom's mother has chosen an ensemble of navy blue lace . . .

Nathaniel Forbes is serving as best man for his brother and the ushers are Merrill Hunt, Jr., Alexander Bill of Cambridge, Charles Goodyear of Weston, Robert E. Eaton of Syracuse, N. Y., John D. Aiken of Wellesley and New York and Robert Hall of Moorestown, N. J. . . .

Following their honeymoon the bridal couple will make their home in Cambridge at 106 Winthrop street . . .

Gertrude Coffin Has Garden Wedding

ALL THOSE CONCERNED with the wedding rehearsal last evening at which Gertrude Coffin and John S. Shelton gave last minute instructions to their bridesmaids and ushers, did not have to bother to take their evening clothes along to Duxbury for a formal "after the rehearsal" dinner party . . . for, instead, there was a jolly beach picnic under the stars with plenty of rollicking songs and loud and lusty toasts for the bridal couple . . .

The rehearsal was in preparation for this afternoon's garden wedding at which Gertrude and John are being married by Rev. Abbott Peterson of Brookline . . . It is taking place at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop B. Coffin of Brookline and Duxbury . . . Hannah Coffin is attending her sister as maid of honor and the bridesmaids include their cousin, Ruth Coffin of Brookline, Sarah Woolsey of New Haven, and Mrs. David Livingston, the former Isabella Lee of Wellesley . . .

Henry Shelton, Jr. is best man for his brother . . . The bridegroom, who is taking his bride to New Haven to live, is a student at the Yale Graduate School . . . He is a graduate of Pomona College in California . . . The bride is a graduate of Beaver Country Day School and Vassar College . . . She made her debut in the season of 1932-33 . . .

Irwins Hosts for Niece

The first tea party of the fall debutante season was held at the Belgate home of Mr. and Mrs. Will Irwin this afternoon. The affair was in honor of Miss Ines Thomson, daughter of Mrs. Edith Haynes Thompson and niece of the Irwins. The flower-decorated tea tables were set in the house and on the spacious portico . . .

Miss Thompson wore a quaint old-fashioned dress of eyelet taffeta and carried an old-fashioned bouquet as she stood in the receiving line with her mother and Mrs. Irwin. Miss Thompson was in blue crepe with a matching hat, and Mrs. Irwin chose a black print with a yellow jonquil design . . .

Six girls from out of town, who were Miss Thompson's classmates at the Scarboro School on the Hudson, are house guests at the Irwins, and served as pourers. In this group were Patricia Elliott of New Rochelle, N. Y., Virginia Kingsbury of Woodstock, N. Y., Jean Lindsay of Yonkers, N. Y., Jane Parker of Truro, N. Y., daughter of Phyllis Duganne, the well known author, and Sarah and Priscilla Smith of Winter Park, Florida, cousins of Miss Thompson. Among the season's debutantes who also poured were Cornelia Baker, Jean Cullen, Constance De Cormis, Mary Casey, Barbara Sail, Mary Ober and postdebutante Anna Minot.

FALL DEB SEASON OFF TO SMILING START

MERALYN B. DALTON JOAN S. THOMSON LUCY L. POPE

THE FIRST DEBUTANTE PARTY of the new fall season was evidently an enjoyable affair judging by the happy expressions of the hostess, Joan Thomson, and two of her guests, Meralyn B. Dalton and Lucy L. Pope. The party was a luncheon given yesterday at The Country Club by Miss Thomson's mother, Mrs. Robert Farrington. Miss Dalton is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Dalton of Newtonville and Miss Pope's parents are the Ralph Popes of Brookline.

BELMONT, MELROSE BRIDALS

Barbara Hall Announces Plans

Next Saturday's another one of those days when well-dressed troopers for gentlemen and fine clothes, for the ladies are necessities if you're attending any of the numerous weddings slated for the eleventh of the month . . .

The Farley-Hall nuptials in Belmont occupy the foremost position on the list with Barbara Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hall of Watertown, exchanging wedding vows with Jose William Platley of Manchester-by-the-Sea and Washington, D. C.

IN BRIDAL PARTY

A great deal of pomp will surround the wedding with five attendants serving Barbara on her wedding day. Betty McCarthy will be her honor maid, while the quartet of bridesmaids include Ada Erlandson of Belmont, who's just returned from summer in California; Mary Rogers McCarthy of Somerville, Clare Ryan of Newton, and Margaret Flatley of Manchester, sister of the bridegroom.

Best man at the nuptials at which Rev. Charles Maguire will officiate, will be Thomas O'Connor of Dorchester and Joseph Flatley heads the usher corps. Others are William Flatley, another brother of the bridegroom, Thomas Harding of Pawtucket, Rhode Island, and Edmund Powers and Otis Powers of Belmont.

TECH GRADUATE

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception will be held for the two families at the Oakley Country Club in Belmont.

Barbara was graduated from Emmanuel College and is prominent in alumnae affairs. She is a member of the Junior Philomathia executive board and last season was chairman of the club's music committee.

Mr. Flatley, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dominick Flatley of Manchester, was educated at St. John's Preparatory School, Chauncy Hall and Massachusetts Institute of Technology. On their return from their wedding trip, the couple will make their home in Clarendon, Virginia.

Saturday's wedding will bring to a close the whirla-gig of parties which have been preceding the nuptials. Betty McCarthy was hostess at a shower and buffet supper at her home in Belmont a short while ago. An informal luncheon at the Blacksmith Shop in Lockport feted the future Mrs. Flatley and Friday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hall entertain the entire bridal party at a dinner at their Watertown home.

Also joining the ranks of the brides-elect is Bernice Shafmaster, whose engagement to Dr. Daniel Abramson, son of Mrs. Morris Abramson of Hartford, Ct., was recently announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Shafmaster.

BARBARA HALL, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hall of Watertown, who has chosen next Saturday as the date of her wedding to John Flatley of Manchester and Washington, D. C.

Marion Beeley To Wed Arthur Barry

The old adage of changing the name and not the letter pressing us to look out for fair Marion Beeley of Melrose who assumes the name, Barry, Saturday afternoon when she weds Arthur Barry of Jamaica Plain in a quiet ceremony in the rectory of St. Mary's Church in Melrose.

Mrs. Robert Allman, the former Pauline Beeley, will be her sister's only attendant and Edward Barry will be his brother's best man. A reception at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Harold Beeley, follows the ceremony, then the couple leave for the Copley Plaza where they'll be feted at a formal dinner dance.

Mr. Barry, who attended Villanova College is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Barry of Burroughs street, Jamaica Plain.

Art Exhibit on South Shore

Summer hasn't been just a long stretch of lazy days for several members of South Shore's younger set who have spent the season developing their artistic ability at Elizabeth Evans Hobby Home in Scituate.

At an exhibit recently given at the well-known spot, seascapes by Marie Duplain of Boston received favorable comment. Marie spent most of her last season abroad studying painting in European art centers.

Also occupying a favorable position at the exhibit were the marine studies by Marie Celeste O'Malley, who leaves her Cohasset home shortly to resume her course at Manhattanville College.

Society Notes

MRS. WILLIAM STUART FORBES, Mrs. Richard Gorham, and Mrs. James Storrow, Jr., are among the prominent Boston women who have recently added their names to the already long list of patronesses for the benefit performance of "Victoria Regina," at the Shubert on Tuesday evening, September 21.

MADGE TELLS DICKY OF APPEAL

CHAPTER 100

DICKY could have chosen no better ruse for answering my signaled appeal to speak to him alone than the pretext of needing my help in checking the captions of his drawings.

It is a task with which I often help him.

"I suppose to make it click, we'd better go to my studio," Dicky said in an undertone and I nodded, but spoke no word until we were safely inside his studio bedroom and the door locked and Dicky had drawn up chairs for us.

"Now what's troubling the alleged brain?" he asked.

CONFESSES HER PLAN

"Plenty," I answered generally, and then I told him of Mrs. Tiver's call and of her bringing the most appealing child, that Marion had enclosed in a revealing letter to my good neighbor.

"I don't like that!" Dicky said, frowning when I had finished a verbatim account of Marion's letter to me.

"Neither do I," I agreed quickly, "but I don't see how we can do, I can't very well tell Lillian about the letter."

"No, I suppose you can't," Dicky said reluctantly adding a bit vindictively, "but if it wasn't for that letter I really don't see what ought to be done."

"But we can't just let Lillian be stampeded," I said, "we've got to decide something right away, at least talk to answer the child's letter."

"You've decided something already, Darby," said unsmiling Dicky giving me a searching look.

"I'll confess," I said, "I want to go down to Whitney Hall and see Marion tomorrow."

I'M GAME AGAIN

Dicky literally laid the foundation for a fit of laughter that was unaffectedly. When we finished mending the letter from Marion, we decided to have lunch right there and then. I had not been to Whitney Hall since we made business in New York which needed my attention. And all of a sudden I realized that it was going unrewarded, that to my lawfully wedded husband my motherhood was a drive, my home a refuge.

Your lawfully wedded husband ought to be ashamed of himself," I said, "I'm game again. After all, Darby and Jill can carry on now. I'll go with you."

"Your Figure, Madame!"

Relaxation Necessary to Beauty

By IDA JEAN KAIN

FORMULA for youth: Oil to keep your skin smooth, and relaxation to keep your nerves unkinked.

Maybe you work too hard at staying young. Learn to take it easy and "do nothing" for beauty some part of every day.

Even in the beauty shops these days relaxation is an important part of the treatment.

Part of the relaxing is harder than work, and this is particularly true of exercise women. However, we are beginning to appreciate the importance of regular relaxation. The actress whose career depends upon youth has learned the art of relaxing, and the business woman is learning that relaxation is necessary to efficiency.

To begin with, very few of us know how to relax. It takes practice. You may need relaxing exercises to help untie the kinks in your nerves.

You can take any set of exercises and make them serve as relaxation if you do them correctly. The following, however, are especially adapted to the high strung, nervous people. Take these exercises as if your arms and legs were no longer—as if you were as floppy as a rag doll.

For most of us relaxing is hard. Let yourself go with this exercise.

Standing with one foot slightly ahead of the other, stretch the arms overhead. Inhale, and increase the upward stretch of first one arm and then the other. Now, exhale, and relax all over, letting the arms drop, the knees sag, and the spine go loose. Do the exercise three times to take away all tension.

Go loose-jointed and limber with this bobbing exercise.

Stand with feet wide apart and let the trunk flop forward limply, arms dangling and head hanging.

Shrug the tension out of your shoulders; now come to a standing position and, without straightening the movement, go down again.

Let the top of your body bob up and down effortlessly. This exercise relieves all tension from the back and spine.

Here is a spine flexer that helps one relax from the base of the neck down.

POSITION—Kneeling on the floor with feet under the hips, legs straight back under body, arms down at sides.

MOVEMENT—Bring the arms up overhead and move the trunk forward, unfolding at the knees and sliding the arms forward on the floor. Fold again, and as you sit back on the feet, stretch the upper part of the body back. This exercise with all the laziness that is in you.

For a perfect relaxation and beauty program follow the exercises with a half hour of rest. Lie down in a darkened room and let yourself "go heavy" on the bed—no tension. Warm compresses on the eyes help to relax the eye muscles. Use a double-strength eye solution and dilute with an equal quantity of hot water. Cleanse your face with cream, but leave on only a thin film of cream while you rest. Clothes, heavy cream and binding clothes interfere with perfect rest.

A half hour of peace before dinner will make a new woman out of you.

Stretching exercises are the best relaxers. Send for the "Exercises to Stretch the Fat from Waistline, Ribs and Wishbone." Write to Ida Jean Kain, in care of this paper, and enclose a stamped return envelope.

Once-Model Husband Now Accuses Quiet Wife Of Having Dates

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

FORTY—that's man's dangerous age. Ask any wife. But ask especially those whose no longer youthful husbands are, without reason or explanation, acting like schoolboys.

There are millions of such men and this "dangerous age" is very much a reality. But why?

Men are fighting the mounting years vainly trying to forget them or conceal them, just as a woman does when she goes in for hair-dyeing and facial-lifting. That's why.

The symptoms of this "dangerous age"? Here are some of them—in a letter that I received this morning from a reliable friend.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My two children and I came to this city from Chicago, where we had come to get employment during the depression. The first two years we were with him my home life was very happy, but since he has been promoted and is thrown with his job he constantly accuses me of being unfaithful and insists that I go with other men.

He is cute and belittling to me before company, or else he ignores me and sneers at me to get his greatest pleasure in hurting my feelings.

I have never had the least interest in anyone outside of my husband and children, being the old-fashioned type of wife and mother.

I hardly know how to treat him when these accusations are made. We have been married 20 years. CONSTANT READER.

DEAR FRIEND:

It does me as well as your husband good to hear of anyone in the dangerous age who wishes to remain faithful and who has always been safe and sane where he was.

After 20 years of marriage men sometimes have a feeling which is the equivalent of that real for the first time by women at middle age.

Hating to think of growing old, they dream things of romance and adventure that they have been denying themselves to the best of wives.

Try to put in with him. Keep busy in a constructive course, and allow a while for passing storms.

WHAT SHALL SHE DO?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm a bride of six weeks and would be very happy if my husband would be a companion at night, or consult with me about a social engagement.

When the young man first began to come to our apartment I felt quite flattered.

Knowing he was unemployed and looking for work, I often made him a cup of coffee and sandwich before he left for the day.

But now he has become a pest. He not only does he come, but he has begun to make changes even at my table. He has even had the audacity to have both a knife and carafe with me.

I don't want to tell my mother about this because I know she'd make him downstairs.

Tell me what to do. He's a perfect nuisance, and I believe he's of the type that really doesn't want to work.

He lives with his sister, who gives him a little money for carfare. How can I get rid of him?

NEWLYWED.

DEAR CHILD:

Nothing easier.

Have a sandwich on your door, peep out and when you see the unwelcome creature say: "I'm so sorry I can't invite you in, but I'm terribly busy and am just going out to something of that sort."

No reason why you should be bothered with a man of this type.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

LOWLY Hamburger Goes "SOCIAL"

FROM MARTHA LEE'S WEDNESDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER WNAC.

THE LOWLY hamburger has burgeoned into society as far as menu planning goes and has acquired a raft of relatives on the way.

From a lowly start at roadside stands wagons and the like, the humble burger has made the grade to the smartest tables, and turned every hostess into a fan.

Pickles or relishes are excellent as the well-rounded hamburger needs no sauce. Any burger, beef, lamb, veal, pork, or game burger.

MIXING BURGERS

Mix a lot of seasonings at one time and grind a peck to a bushel. Keep on hand prepared seasonings. Shake into patties and you can think, please and, to carry them, stack them up between layers of waxed paper.

For your seasonings, use plenty of salt and pepper. And to add, use Worcestershire sauce, finely chopped onion, prepared mustard, tomato catsup, chili sauce or grated cheese.

We have learned that one organization raising funds in men's night at a dinner, found out that the patties should not be made with the hands. The grinding of the meat, the mixing and pressing of the hand pack the meat too closely and spoil flavor. Use a fork to mix the meat and pressing of the hand pack the meat too closely and spoil flavor. Use a fork to mix the meat and pressing of waxed paper.

A good rule to remember.

COOKING BURGERS

Burgers should be cooked in plenty of shortening. Cook them slowly, or brown them quickly and then let them cook until done.

THE BURGER MEAL

First of all, be sure to try a Hungry Jack seasoned hamburger, served with salted bananas.

CUBAN HAMBURGER

1 lb. hamburger
1 tablespoon tomato catsup
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon poultry seasoning
¼ teaspoon garlic salt
¼ teaspoon celery salt
2 green-tipped or all-yellow bananas
2 tablespoons butter
6 slices bread

Mix hamburger thoroughly with salt and seasonings. Form into patties about four inches in diameter and ½ inch thick. Fry in butter, first starting until browned on both sides turning once. While hamburgers are frying, split the bananas in half lengthwise and then crosswise and sauté in butter. Serve each burger on a hamburger patties on toasted bread, top with the bananas using two halves for each. Garnish with parsley. Garnish with the remaining bananas. Serves 6.

But there was a heady attraction about her. Despite everything, Guy had an almost uncontrollable impulse to take her in his arms.

And it wasn't merely physical beauty. There was a spiritual emanation from these great dark eyes of hers, as though a lamp were lighted within.

That made her nearness doubly dangerous.

Triumphs Ahead for Costume Suits

By ANNICE BRINK
Fashion Editor

GREY kidskin bolero tops slim wool frock (left), tied in with suede sash.

IT IS going to be a clean fashion sweep for the costume suit this fall!

Neatly detailed frocks on svelte lines, with natural shoulders and concave midriffs, topped with boleros, jackets or almost full-length coats are the pet enthusiasm of chic girls.

All have interesting fur treatment, from sweeping stoles to boleros no bigger than babies' bed jackets. Many a girl is going to see a fashion future ahead for one of the separate fur boleros—and ensemble it with cloth coat and evening wrap later on.

Wool weaves of extreme softness and lightness are best . . . they may be woven of feathers, or rabbit's wool, or whatever, they're an option.

Forewarned is for armed . . . lots of suits have fur sleeves or fur wristlets with fabric sleeves as in the trick little number shown today.

As for color—there are brilliantly deep plums, greens, much grey, natural tones, as well as the more formal and dressy black.

Many Causes for Short Breath

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.

AS WE grow older we notice that severe exertion and prolonged exercise are difficult.

Even the simple climbing of familiar stairs may cause shortness of breath. This is a condition we rarely notice in our youth.

Shortness of breath as distressing as the disease may be is a sign of some importance. It is a common symptom often disregarded or accepted as something trivial. But there is no denying that persistent dyspnoea may be sent as a warning, for example, it may indicate some disturbances of the heart. Do not misunderstand me—I do not [illegible] shortness of breath [illegible] exertion, necessarily [illegible] that disease. But what I wish to make clear is that if you are troubled more and more with shortness of breath after the slightest exercise, it is well that you consult your doctor. It may be a sign of some minor disorder, one which will speedily respond to care and medication.

During the World War it was common to notice dyspnoea among the soldiers in the front [illegible]. Under such circumstances it could be easily traced to physical exhaustion, excessive fatigue and apprehension. In civilian life it is common to find dyspnoea among persons who suffer from severe emotional strain, worry, fear or any other physical or mental upset.

The sufferer may complain of a feeling of uneasiness or distress [illegible] the heart. It may be one confirmed [illegible] has some serious heart disease. In all probability all he needs is rest and relaxation.

Of course, shortness of breath in a child or a young adult is a more serious symptom. It must never be ignored. But it is much more common in adults and especially elderly persons. If the ankles become swollen and persistently edema persists. If the shortness of breath is sent to the doctor is extremely important.

Hardening of the arteries, high blood pressure or weakness of the heart are frequently encountered in elderly persons, is a common cause for shortness of breath. Individuals afflicted this way should be restricted in their activity and placed on a simple and nutritious diet.

NEW WAY TO GREATER PERSONAL DAINTINESS

Shave With Deodorizing Cream

By ARLINE GOULD

IT MAKES no difference whether it's your own little gold model or your husband's trusty razor you use . . . but a razor is as much a part of your all-necessary equipment as a powder puff.

And no one's done much to help us out about the whole problem until recently.

You may be sure his wife was behind it, but a famous chemist not long ago devised the wonder of wonders for personal daintiness a shaving cream especially for feminine use, and one as completely pure and irritating that it's used as a mild deodorant [illegible] after shaving.

Many girls shave their legs to perfect [illegible] every [illegible] them [illegible] two [illegible] prefer [illegible] and [illegible] that [illegible]

In fact we don't doubt that the complexion of their legs would soon be rivaling their faces.

Remember, it looks and feels like one of your choicest tissue creams. It is one of the most satiny mixtures it's ever been our pleasure to use, simple not comparable to some deodorants that are difficult and messy to get at.

[illegible]

It's being done everywhere we assure you because of the nuisance of old creams and softening lotions might present.

Actually a girl is damaging her underarm skin to the extent that with a glamorous night life ahead she's going to have discolored and irritated skin to set her back on her heels instead of the dazzingly soft shoulders she should present to public view.

"The understanding [illegible] community is feeble and [illegible] It [illegible] nizes here and [illegible] is [illegible] there. What is called elementary education [illegible] about the world does not in fact educate because it does not properly inform.

"Education should [illegible] on what is taught as a fact; what we are telling our young people directly about the world in which they are to live; what is the world picture we are presenting to [illegible]

"What is the frame work of conceptions about reality and about the complications in which the rest of our mental existence will have to be fitted."

Our average [illegible] learning this he added, is not more than 2400 hours—all we can be given to build up a coherent picture of the world we live in.

In his picture of necessary formal knowledge, Wells discards, as for the past twenty years he has discarded it, the more parochial and chauvinistic national histories. Stories of mediaeval England and modern America do not fit into his picture of what children need. World history means cinema as well as accidental history, something more than the story of the limited racial civilizations of which we are a part.

Wells' View of History Includes Many Fields

As usual his picture of education is a picture of history teaching, with this difference: To Wells history means also the story of evolution, elementary physics, historical and economic geography, biology, and even botany. The legends and scandals and revenges of a few hundred years ago are not really history and can be passed over. Instead the study should deal with the fundamentals of government.

It is a fine idea, but I suspect that 2400 hours is somewhat brief for the kind of history—the kind of education—the venerable and lively British thinker has in mind. But already by his life-work he has done a good deal to reform education as it was during his and our youth.

The rates I have promulgated for all classes of vehicles are fair to the insurance companies and to the public," Detelles stated. "It must be understood that the tables published are of a tentative nature, and that the public has the right to protest if it sees fit to do so.

READY TO ADJUST

"That is why the public hearing is to be held. I'll listen to all remonstrants at a fair hearing, and if they show me where I am wrong, I will not be afraid to admit it and make adjustments."

HIGH SCHOOL BOYS AND GIRLS! BECOME SPORTS WRITERS

An announcement of major importance to every high school boy and girl of New England is made here

It's an opportunity that every red blooded youngster has longed for, a golden chance to realize a craving which goes hand in hand with those who love sports

Briefly it is this

The Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser invite every boy and girl in high school to send in stories of their high school football team

It can deal with prospects for the coming season, it can be an interview with star players or the coach it can be some sort of a feature having to do with the unusual aspects of a certain player or coach

In other words, anything which is of NEWS value or FEATURE value will be acceptable.

These stories can be up to 1000 words in length, no more This is one full colum in the sports pages

Each day for close to a month, a story will appear under the writer's by-line, a dream realization, and his or her picture will be inserted as well, provided a suitable one is mailed with the manuscript.

There will be prizes too

The prizes will be pairs of tickets to the choice football games played by Boston College and Harvard

The list of games for which the tickets will be awarded will be announced soon

If this isn't a grand and glorious opportunity, then we don't know our youngsters

Who knows but what it will be the stepping stone to a career as a metropolitan sports writer

Every day of the week this office as well as those of other leading sports departments are deluged with youngster inquiries asking "How can we best go about becoming a sports writer?"

Well, fellows and girls, here's the best possible answer we've ever discovered

School starts this week

The stories will be judged by competent critics

They will take into main consideration the news value, the feature value, the style, the brightness, the clarity, the language, all of which go into making successful reporting

Letters may be typewritten or written in long hand, the former preferably. But all must be legible and neatly written

Every story must include a separate piece of paper on which the author's name, his or her age, school, class, and headmaster must be enclosed

Any other information having to do with the author, whether or not he or she is an athlete may also be sent along

We'll have more about this grand story writing contest daily. But in the meanwhile, let's get our heads together and get to composing the finest series of high school football tales ever written from first hand observation.

Remember the stories may be based entirely on true not figment of imagination

Start today. All stories are to be sent to the School Story Writing Editor Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston

Connie's Twilight: Baer's Bombast, And O'Hara Ledgers

BASEBALL'S OLD TESTAMENT CHARACTER the singularly lonely and sad-faced elder known as Connie Mack, is nearing his life's December. Soon, perhaps before the end of next year, his scorecard wagglings, his lobby sittings and pullman prowlings will pass into the mists of memory.

He is 75 now and pestered increasingly with twinges, though he said when in Boston last week that the old days when he wore a hard hat and disciplined some of the most picturesque innebriates of the game seemed "Only yesterday." I said it would make an appropriate title for his life's memoirs and he replied he doubted that he would ever get around to writing the story

AUSTEN LAKE

He looked withered and tired and hinted that the hot weather lumps, the stereotyped hotel foods and the long, lurching train sleeps had sapped his failing strength and the time was near to arrange his life's work and retire to the late twilight. He didn't say that exactly, but the inference was clear. Like H. G. Wells, the British writer, in recognizing his approaching horizon and having said, "I resent with all my heart the time which is near at hand when Life's nurse will say, 'Bertie put away your toys for it is nearly time for bed.'" Connie has postponed to the last limit of his failing strength the moment when he too, will have to arrange his playthings and prepare for the last climb upstairs.

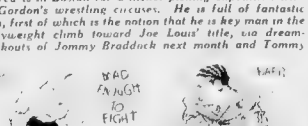
CROWD ELEASER

Max, of the Piccadilly Baers

MAX BAER, BEAMING, WELL FED AND trimly tailored is in Boston for a nickel picking expedition with the Gordon's wrestling circuses. He is full of fantastic ideas, first of which is the notion that he is key man in the heavyweight climb toward Joe Louis' title, via dream knockouts of Jommy Braddock next month and Tommy



Farr later on. He is, he says, serious sober, earnest and domesticated now—yet in the same breath mentions the de luxe "swallow and nibble" parlor which he expects to open next spring in London under the title of Max Baer's Club Anglais. He says that he is a style setter, man-about-town and public chum to the Londoner's, who have formed an unaccountable passion for him. "Why," demands this larynxathlete, "should I remain a punk in America when I am a popular idol in London." So, already he has adopted British idioms in his speech, calling things "jolly" and exiting with "cheerios."

He adds soon that the reason why [illegible]

Up to Commission To Justify Ouster | O'Hara Smiles In Penthouse

By JACK CONWAY

Narragansett Park, Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 8—The Battle of Narragansett has now reached a point where the rival factions are pulling their punches and looking toward the clock. The pace has been rather torrid since last Thursday night.

This is the seventh round, and if it is going to be a 15-round battle the boys are entitled to do a little sparring so as to get their second wind, and think of some more unkind things they can say of each other.

With the case before the Supreme Court, Walter O'Hara, Governor Robert E. Quinn and Chairman Francis Kiernan of the Racing Commission, believe they should restrict themselves to statements in regard to fundamentals while the jurists decide the issues before them.

BLAIK TO PUSH AIR ATTACK

Hanover, N. H., Sept. 8 (AP)—Physically, the Dartmouth Indians will be much weaker during the coming intercolltgiate football season than they were last year but before their "ivy league" rivals start cheering, it would be well to heed Earl (Red) Blaik's warning that he will start his fourth season in Hanover with a dangerous and colorful team.

Eleven of the most dependable players on last year's once-beaten club graduated last June so Blaik faces an alarming shortage of seasoned material. But the great majority of last year's reserves have had at least one season under Blaik and his only acute problems are filling in for Fullback Johnny Siman and Dave Cameron, the 60-minute left tackle.

The nucleus of the 1937 Tribesmen is formed by three of last years starters, Captain Merrill Pavia, right end, left and right halfbacks Fred Hollingsworth and Bob Maitland and Larry Hull, a 1936 regular who is ready to take over the parade wing position after a year of ineligibility.

PROMISING

Blaik has a wealth of promising backfield material to install. He has seven backs who appear likely to be 0 per cent overhead, but he will miss the talented Gordon Clark, who was considered by passers and punters on last year's squad, who was killed in a recent automobile accident. Herb Cleveland, a sure-fire three-year letter winner, possesses only about a fraction of Clark's natural passing ability, but he is a standout all-around back. Harry Gates is the junior candidate to Hank Whisler, the graduate quarterback.

Vernon (Mouse) Taylor is a competitor for the signal calling post, but the interference of Blaik's fullbacks deserves as Camelot did, is going to be terrific. So that can't not be centered in the same breath with Gordon Bennett, last year's consistent ground gainer. The starting guards, Jim Feeley and Gus Zitzelsberger another season, but Blaik has the experience to replace the feats of Jack Williams, Bill Cole and Dave McEvoy, but Bob Gibson and Dick Mansfield look enough are worthy successors for even such a colorful center as Carl (Mutt) Hoy.

Dartmouth's rearranged schedule appears ideal for Blaik and his green team which will not feel any serious pressure until late October when it will be called upon to face Harvard, Yale and Princeton on successive Saturdays. The two weeks start the Indians have during Harvard week will probably stand them in good stead at that stage of the campaign.

The Dartmouth schedule: Sept. 25, Bates; Oct. 2, Amherst; 9, Springfield; 16, Brown at Providence; 23, Maine at Orono; 30, Yale at New Haven; Nov. 6, Princeton at Princeton; 13, Cornell; 20, Columbia at New York.

Damon Runyon

What the best movie we have seen so far this year was something called "Night Must Fall." We do not remember that it created any profound sensation, or that it was a scientific movie, nonetheless within it was a great picture.

The star was Mr. Robert Montgomery, and up to now we had viewed Mr. Montgomery's acting with uncommon distaste. We thought he was the foremost exponent of the Smirk School of Acting, which is a distinct problem we would like to solve, apparently there is no one around to tell the boys to cheese it when they get to playing their parts with mannerisms.

We hold that nothing is so good as a good actor, and a good actor is the actor who makes you believe that he is the character he is playing. Many of those screen actors develop mannerisms that never let you lose sight of their actability and identity and we do not think that is good acting.

After seeing Mr. Montgomery in the "Night Must Fall," we have come to the conclusion that he has been misused. He is a fine actor behind a smirk. When an actor you are prepared to resent is able to put aside all of his actability and make you forget who he is, that is pretty slick acting.

CRITICISM ALLOWED

We are not a cinema critic but just a fan, and therefore cram for his seats and therefore are more entitled to beefs about the acting than the critics who get in on the old sleeve.

Our beef during is had all the critics have is a little time. We lose both time and money and besides are crowded into the theater with a crowd into the bargain when the house manager catches on.

"How did you like it?"

We are quite tender-hearted and averse from giving a beef, but we have to register one. So no matter what we really think we say we liked his picture. What we said we did not like it, we said we did not like it the manager will turn to his head usher, or somebody, and say:

"What does that bum know about pictures, anyway?"

Proper spirit but one manager who did not seem greatly consoled by our kindly attitude toward his picture. He was a fellow in Saratoga Springs. He called us up one morning and said:

"Say, after you told me last night you liked that picture, I went back and took another look at it. I just wanted to tell you that I think you are nuts."

MUSICALS ENJOYED

The movie cathedrals have lately been infested by musicals and these, but overdoses of tap dancing are our favorites. There is always room for the cash customer in a musical, because some old time vaudeville fellow is likely to come out of the screen any minute and make you laugh.

The best of the musicals this year was, of course, the one that starred Mr. Winchell and Mr. Bernie. That was a good job. It had a story with a beginning, a middle and an ending and it had great music and Mr. Jack Haley, probably the best light comedian in the business.

Of the screen acting of Mr. Winchell and Mr. Bernie, we will not speak here with all the fervor that is justified. We are connected by both of these gentlemen by ties of friendship, and lacking the cold impartiality of your lay critic we fear if we let ourself go, our judgment would sound biased. Keeping everything toned down as much as possible, we will just say they were prodigious and let it go at that.

The screen musical, we think, is the greatest form of entertainment yet devised by the cinema for us such customers. It is like that exciting void left by the effacement of vaudeville. It takes the place of the old time revue productions of Mr. Ziegfeld, and Mr. White and Mr. Carroll, and others.

The screen musical, in general, may still lack some of that peculiar magic that those stage producers managed to instill into it, but it is constantly improving. Not all those stage productions were masterpieces by any means. We think the screen musicals might sometimes be better off if they did not try to cling too tightly to story, and just let loose all holds like the old revues.

SEPT. 17 Parade Here IS SET

CONSTITUTION DAY NEARS

Massachusetts' observance of the 150th anniversary of the adoption of the United States Constitution on September 17 will be the most impressive in the country, it was freely predicted today by members of the United States Sesquicentennial Celebration Commission appointed by Governor Hurley.

Feature of the state-wide celebration which will begin on Sept. 17 will be the great parade of military, civic and fraternal organizations through downtown Boston streets under command of Adjutant-General Charles H. Cole.

Governor Hurley today is awaiting a reply from Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, widow of President Coolidge to invite her to ride to review the parade from the Governor's stand in front of the State House.

WALSH LODGE INVITED

United States Senators David I. Walsh and Henry Cabot Lodge, former U. S. Senator Marcus Coolidge, and all living former governors have been invited by Governor Hurley to make reviewing honors with him from the Governor's stand.

Governor Hurley will make up the parade which is expected to attract thousands of persons to Boston from all over the state.

School committees in the metropolitan area have been requested by the chairman of the committee on those schools early on Friday afternoon in order that thousands of school children may view this colorful parade.

Regular army and navy detachments and 26th National Guardsmen under command of Major-General Daniel Needham will make up the first division.

Civic and fraternal organizations throughout the state are also expected to be represented by the General Cole's invitation to have units in the line of march.

Veterans of all wars, independent military units and patriotic societies, high school cadets and bands will also be invited to participate throughout the state will also participate.

WRAGG HEADS BOARD

All cases in connection with the observance of the historic anniversary are being planned by the Governor's Commission on the Sesquicentennial, H. Wragg, president of the State Senate.

A contest offering gold medals for the best children's work on the best essays on the Constitution is being planned by the State Department of Education at the request of the Governor's Commission.

While the parade will be the highlight of the celebration, it will serve only as the starting signal for an observance of the historic date which will continue for several weeks throughout the state.

The Governor's Commission is preparing a pamphlet which will be distributed to municipalities in the state recommending appropriate ceremonies to be held in connection with the 150th anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution.

QUINS' NURSE IN HUB

Boston mothers, interested in the Miss Yvonne Leroux brimming up of the Quin screen acting of Mr. Winchell and Mr. Bernie, we will not speak here with all the fervor that is justified. We are connected by both of these gentlemen by ties of friendship, and lacking the cold impartiality of your lay critic we fear if we let ourself go, our judgment would sound biased. Keeping everything toned down as much as possible, we will just say they were prodigious and let it go at that.

War Bonus As Trade Factor

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

In most discussions of current trade trends there is a disposition to overlook the stimulating effect of the war bonus in trade over the middle months of 1936. The result is that when comparisons fail to show up as well this year as last an immediate cry is raised that the whole business picture is retrogressing.

In the first place the soldiers' bonus payments were concentrated in certain areas. Those who live in the West and South could see for themselves what was going on when the bonus payments began to be made and place a simple correlation of market action and the boom in trade records. It was while the latter was at its height and sharply above the comparable period last year neither does the former. Stocks as measured by the Dow-Jones averages are currently at about the same levels as prevailed a year ago. In fact, as a matter of record, the Dow-Jones industrial average closed last Saturday at exactly the same level as it did on the corresponding day of August, 1936. Yet the latter date was the peak of the 1936 boom.

Back in March of this year one recalls that the two leading averages—industrials and rails—swept into new high ground at almost the same time. This, supposedly, represented a reputable signal of the start of a new phase of the bull market in the form of another intermediate advance. Instead it was followed by several sessions of sideline movement and then a sharp decline took place. If memory serves us aright the atmosphere was highly charged with inflation, which was widely dispelled. This action accounts for the pessimism of some traders and observers that the setting of new minimums several days on end after news may prove another false move. They say that if fears on this score as well as on political and business developments prove unfounded a similar short move may well develop.

People who are bearish on the outlook usually ask the question, what will cause the anticipated price recession? Is it the averages that indicate the extent of the recession or something else? Is it something that has happened or something that is going to happen? Some traders have resorted to the technical method of using the ratio of the Dow-Jones industrial average to the Dow-Jones rail average. Others have used the ratio of the Standard Statistics industrial average to the Standard Statistics rail average. Both of these ratios have been at extreme levels in the past and have been used as a guide to the future course of prices.

Now as to what we are going to do with all the above considerations in mind. To begin with the registering of new lows two Tuesday suggests at least doubt in, if not a reversal of, the trend in prices. Therefore it seems wise to seek out a second theory for protecting capital, and without regard to the merits of a debate as to whether a bull or a bear market is now in force. As matters are a straight line decline that ceased over 14 per cent from the industrial index in some three weeks, without a worthwhile rally interesting, is in need of some correction. It seems to us this should take the shape of a bear rally regardless of the decline's ultimate objective. This is particularly true when the various pans of recent sessions is analyzed, and climactic action possibilities are studied.

Consequently while we grant all the possibilities of implied bearishness in the current market picture we do not see a good one protective selling is advised at the moment. Nevertheless, we will stand outside and permit the market itself to provide a second theory for protection of its bearish implications.

Notebook: From a purely academic view 1938 is a year difficult to forget. In many respects it parallels the present . . . The first witnessed an up and down year in the markets . . . The averages supplied a hint of bearishness . . . Nullified almost as soon as given . . . The action took place five years after the start of recovery just as in the present case . . . And the loss registered by the industrials ran to some 16.6 per cent which has nearly been equalled now . . . The sole difference was that 1928 was not as much of a straight line affair and that is what we are counting on most heavily in supposing the present 14 per cent loss sufficient.

STOCKS In Nervous MOOD

SOME SECTIONS IMPROVE

New York, Sept. 8. The continued Mediterranean crisis and fighting in China left the stock market in a nervous mood today, although some sections improved.

After a mixed opening, traders attempted a rally pushing the industrial average and several others above Tuesday's closing levels, but early in the afternoon the market turned downward and the list was under pressure at the close.

Transfers approximated 2,200,000 shares.

Trading downward were International Nickel, Canadian Pacific, Standard Brands, Douglas Aircraft, Liggett & Myers, Loew's, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Chrysler, Packard, Electric Power & Light, Commercial Solvents, Allied Chemical, Du Pont, Eastman Kodak, Kennecott, International Nickel, Anaconda, Bethlehem Steel, Republic Steel, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Baltimore & Ohio, Atchison, Santa Fe, Pennsylvania, Consolidated Edison, New York Central, Boston & Maine, Southern Railway, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Standard Oil of California, Texas Corporation, Atlantic Refining, Consolidated Oil, Phillips Petroleum, Sinclair Oil, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Union Carbide, American Can, Corn Products, Coca-Cola, Continental Can, Owens-Illinois Glass, Westinghouse Electric, General Electric, General Motors, Curtiss-Wright, Aviation Corporation, United Aircraft, Boeing Airplane, Douglas Aircraft, North American Aviation, Radio Corporation, Columbia Broadcasting, Western Union, American Telephone, Consolidated Edison, Public Service of New Jersey, International Harvester, Deere & Co., Johns-Manville, Gillette Safety Razor, Eastman Kodak, Woolworth, Safeway Stores, United Fruit, American Tobacco, Liggett & Myers, Reynolds Tobacco, Lorillard, Schenley Distillers, National Distillers, Seagram-Distillers, Hiram Walker, Anheuser-Busch, Brown Shoe, International Shoe, Kresge, Kroger Grocery, National Dairy Products, Borden, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Macy, Gimbel, Penney, Woolworth, Safeway Stores, Commercial Solvents, Air Reduction, Allied Chemical, Du Pont, Union Carbide, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Freeport Sulphur, Monsanto Chemical, Westvaco Chlorine, Mathieson Alkali, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Corning Glass, Owens-Illinois Glass, Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass, Johns-Manville, Celotex, United States Gypsum, Certain-teed Products, Armstrong Cork, Congoleum-Nairn, Kelvinator, Nash-Kelvinator, Hudson Motor, Hupp Motor, Studebaker, Packard, Chrysler, General Motors, Hudson Motor, Nash-Kelvinator

Modern Piracy

THE USE of the term "Piracy," to describe mysterious naval operations in the Mediterranean Sea is probably a considerable stretch of the real meaning of the word.

Pirates, as we remember them from "Treasure Island" days, were very bold and very bad sea plunderers, looting everything in sight.

Obviously, the current sinkings in the Mediterranean have a military purpose, much as they would have if the nations involved were at war.

But we are in a strange era of war time, including the weird travesty of "undeclared" war in China. Nations go through all the motions of war, while retaining their pretentions to peace.

China and Japan, slaughtering each other's people, are friendly nations officially.

And in the Mediterranean, where British, Russian, Italian and Spanish vessels are found in very warlike situations, their respective governments, maintaining the ceremonies of peace, must coin new words to cloak old and familiar enterprise.

PIRACY is not new in the Mediterranean, in fact, the American Navy once fought a busy little war with the Tripolitan pirates in the Mediterranean.

But whether it is piracy or something else that is going on in the Mediterranean now does not concern us this time.

Our impression is that the incidents in the Mediterranean are less mysterious than they appear to be.

Perhaps it is not mysterious that something should happen just at this time to occupy the attention of the British navy closer home than Japan.

The Ban on "Shantytown"

THE plight of 48 dwellers of Dorchester's "Shantytown" evicted by court order from their rude shacks interests New England.

Should these unfortunate men be permitted to live their own lives in their own way in their makeshift, dump pile community?

Or should society step in and compel them to adopt a cleaner, healthier mode of existence?

There is only one answer: these men cannot be allowed to live in conditions of such unbelievable squalor. It is too easy for a contagious disease to start there and to spread possibly throughout the metropolitan area.

But it is not solely the welfare of others that must be considered. The shantymen deserve attention—more than they have apparently been giving themselves.

Living in dire poverty and filth is as injurious to mental as to physical health. A person so situated for an extended period is bound to sink deeper in the depths of abasement. Too often insanity and crime are his eventual fate.

As an intelligent people in an intelligent age we should fan the spark of initiative and courage we hope burns in everyone. We cannot afford to ignore or tolerate a condition that extinguishes that spark.

The Drive Must Continue

BOSTON'S newly-formed degeneracy squad makes several arrests and announces that the roundup of suspected sex offenders will continue indefinitely. This is in the public interest.

Police records of murders committed by depraved men show almost without exception that the major crimes followed a number of minor conflicts with the law. Authorities failing to recognize the dangers inherent in this mania, freed the men repeatedly. Eventually a gruesome killing resulted.

This situation is deplored by Dr. William Healy, director of the Boston Judge Baker Foundation and one of the foremost psychiatrists in the world.

"Locking up a criminal moron does not solve anything, except a short respite for society," he says. "We must have more than mere jails for these unfortunate individuals.

"Segregated colonies which will provide proper treatment and care are the solution."

That is the correct view. The time has come when the menace of the sex criminal must be brought into the open, when parents and the children themselves must be made aware of the danger and when our public officials must act to the limit of their power.

Governor Murphy Says "No"

NEW HAMPSHIRE Governor Francis P. Murphy takes issue with President Roosevelt's opinion that New England should surrender her water power resources to the Federal Government.

Mr. Murphy emphatically states his position: he will not exchange assets that may some day be worth billions for a few present millions to control floods. He says:

"I shall never give my approval to any arrangements which would involve the giving up of New Hampshire's right to control and develop the natural resources with which God has endowed our State."

That is the attitude of many New England people, especially of those who believe states should be independent governments, not puppets controlled and owned by Washington.

The President should appreciate this attitude and realize that the concessions he is demanding a. the price for Federal assistance may be vastly more valuable than what he is prepared to give this section.

Let Them All Send Floats

HOW will YOUR city or town be represented in the Boston parade that will commemorate the 150th anniversary of the adoption of the United States Constitution on September 17?

That question concerns every Mayor and every Board of Selectmen in Massachusetts.

It is their duty as the first citizens of their municipalities to see that the people they serve will not be ignored when the entire Commonwealth unites in tribute to the document that has preserved our liberties and protected our lives for a century and a half.

There is no city or town so hard-pressed financially that it cannot afford to equip and send a float or a delegation of citizens to Boston.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

New York, Sept. 8—New York's most temperamental restaurant man is George La Maze. Sometimes he works in the kitchen, sometimes as a maître d'hôtel but wherever he is the diner knows he is about and senses his touch of artistry. Perhaps a better title for him would be host.

He rarely remains in one spot long. As soon as a place he opens is successful he tires of it and goes to new pastures. He is equally well known in Philadelphia, Hollywood, Saratoga, Miami and Palm Beach. La Maze was the first restaurateur to laugh that prohibition off.

Instead, he uses a portable blackboard with the choice dishes chalked on. By his one line to squint or fish for eyeglasses. He never has to worry about patients in every community who will pay any price for the best food and he has proved it. He caters only on the grand scale.

Wherever he is he has choice delicacies shipped from Idaho, select ducklings from Long Island and the prime catches of shrimps and crabs from the Gloucester nets. He goes to the markets himself at daylight — and that's exciting, too, to many chefs are abandoning.

It is interesting to know what the other fellow eats. I never dine out and behold what has been brought to the next table without regretting I did not order the same. There is a trencherman who will dine only in places with booths for that reason. He was constantly having his meal spoiled by seeing the more tempting dishes that came to his neighbors.

At a weekend in Saratoga a while ago I had a close-up of what some headline names enjoy after the races. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt was doing dandy with a Chateau briand a la Condon Rouge, which consisted of a double fillet of beef basted with butter, seasoned and sprinkled with finely chipped ham and fresh bread crumbs. The entire bit garnished with sliced truffles, brussels sprouts and small stuffed tomatoes.

Jock Whitney nearby showed contempt for calories and also the reason perhaps for a growing waistline. He was dallying with what looked to be two miniature gondolas. They were boat-shaped banana skins filled with whipped cream, the sliced bananas previously steeped in Kirsch.

Herbert Bayard Swope was handling an interesting looking salad of filleted smoked herrings, cold beef, boiled potatoes, sour apples, all diced, chopped capers and gherkins, seasoned with French dressing.

Then Joan Bennett, of her double, toying with something scrumptious in desserts—Hartlett pears, cream cheese, dates perched on a timbale of rice flavored with maraschino and all covered with meringue and baked.

Hawkins my drooling tib!

Harry Kemp, steadied tramp poet, seems last of famous characters. Bullets Durgin, Harry Sohia, the Cigarette Girl and Tiny Tim, to cling to Greenwich Village.

He still has quarters in Washington square but has become somewhat a recluse. He is no longer a figure at the bars and waffle parlors, but has become serious and is now working on an earnest student at the W.P.A. adult educational classes, where Sanskrit, Chinese, Japanese and Arabic are taught free.

Incidentally, in studying Japanese he discovers the meaning of the great Mt. Fujiyi. Work off and Jack London, devels among the submerged, guessed at a definition, but when Harry Kemp finds it is from the Japanese both meaning on all sides, everywhere.

I have a postcard from Mason Peters, formerly of my birthplace, Flatsburg, Mo., who has returned there after years to look at the land home and perhaps refurbish it.

Peters was a New York newspaperman of the days of Richard Harding Davis and celebrated as wit around the Lambs along with Wilton Lackaye, Willie Collier and other trigger-tongued nimble minded.

Several years ago he decided the metropolis was no place to live and hiked to Arizona where he has been prospecting and doing all right.

Another Flattsburg, Mo., born boy, is the film character actor, Sidney Toler. He was born there in a covered wagon while his parents were migrating West.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Elsie Robinson

These daily horrors . . . Five hundred innocent bystanders wiped out by one bursting bomb . . . Thousands of their families left destitute and heartbroken.

An eight-year-old girl standing and outside a candy store . . . Splendid youngsters torn to bits by machine guns . . . Mothers begging for their children's lives . . . Babies wasted, fatherless.

Useful citizens, gone and gone forever, struck down while performing routine duties.

WHY DOES GOD LET IT ALL HAPPEN?

Little Sallie Carter, of Ian Avenue, is saying: "Nothing fazes such bewilderment and misery pile as long and I have felt there is a definite reason behind it. Sometimes I think it is from the Japanese both meaning on all sides, everywhere.

"It's all such a pointless mess," she cries. "If there's a God He must be a mighty poor manager. This God that sees even a sparrow fall but does nothing to save it from falling!

"What's the sense in it? What's the use of trying to be decent in a world like this where anything can happen and nobody cares?"

Tough questions, young Sallie. So tough that they've stopped many of us before we even started. nipped our enthusiasm, killed our faith—and in saying "No, what's the use?"

MAN'S OWN FAULT

Yet the answer seems fairly plain.

WHY DOES GOD LET THESE THINGS HAPPEN?

He doesn't. MAN DOES.

God isn't responsible for all these horrors . . . outraged babies, mass murders, cruelty, crookedness and corruption. Man's to blame for it all.

But couldn't GOD step in and put a stop to it?

I presume He could. But would you want Him to?

No, you wouldn't . . . and neither would any other self-respecting person.

Why not?

Because if HE did, HED rob us of the one power which lies within reach of others—our free will.

Free will . . . the right to make your own decisions, there's the one thing which makes us a people instead of a puppet. We don't always, of course, use that free will right.

WE CAN STOP IT

Yet we could, if we ceased hideous plunders—vicious unfairness—all that ugly mess of which daily headlines tell us. If we would rather work out our own destiny than have anyone, even dictator, do it for us.

For we feel, and rightly, that we can't go on without trying. We've moved without stumbling as we go along.

Why is everything in such a mess? That's why. Those who aren't a sign of weakness . . . they're a sign of Power . . . of a power which we've been too afraid to use wisely, too young to use fairly. But we have what it takes . . . and some day we'll make the grade.

Think of that the next time such loathsome sickens you. Don't get mad—grab your dollrags and threaten to go home. Don't say, "This proves there isn't any God. Or if there is, He doesn't care!"

Say rather, "Yes, this is ugly. But it needn't stay ugly. For God is on the job and God does care. He cares so much that He has given me the power to cure it all. FREE WILL . . . THE POWER TO BUILD A HEAVEN OR DIG A HELL!

"GOD'S GIVEN ME THE FIXINGS! SO BRING ON YOUR HORRORS . . . AND WATCH MY SMOKE!"

That's That

The estimate by Department of Commerce officials that expenditures of American tourists in France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy and other foreign countries this year will total 400 million dollars is important.

It shows that some of our European debtors COULD be paying something on their debts to the United States if they really wanted to pay.

Most of the 800 millions of American dollars spent abroad by American tourists were spent in Europe.

When our former allies began repudiating their debts to the United States they claimed inability to pay. Their favorite argument ran something like this:

"We either have to pay in gold or in goods. We haven't the gold and you don't want to take our goods."

That argument had some merit but not enough to excuse debt repudiation. It ignored the fact that European nations could and still can use American tourist dollars for debt payments to the United States.

Our European debtors know we would not refuse to accept American dollars in payment of international debts. And they take in enough of those dollars annually to meet a large part of their semiannual payments. The trouble is that they are more interested in using all the money they can beg, borrow or grab to get ready for another war than they are in paying honest debts.

Thus far, the Sino-Japanese war indicates Japan either has been very much overrated, as a military power, or China has been very much underrated. Instead of finding China a "push over," as they expected, the Japanese have discovered the conquest of this weak and unprepared nation is a whole lot more of a job than they had bargained for.

The financial ability of Japan to carry on a war of long duration in China is frequently questioned. But the inability of a nation to pay for a war does not necessarily keep it out of war. The great powers of the earth never were more burdened with debts than they are now.

Pleas have been made to the State Department to try to save an American aviator who is reported to be facing execution by the Insurgent forces in Spain. There isn't anything the government can do more than ask that he be spared. There is no argument it can use nor threat it can make.

But an American citizen goes to a foreign nation and deliberately takes sides in a civil war he forfeits every claim for protection to which his citizenship entitles him.

Boston police announce the capture and confession of the youth said to have slain a 5-year-old boy a few months ago. They say he has served two jail sentences for sex crimes. Imprisonment doesn't cure degenerates.

The father of the slain boy says "All I ask is the privilege of seeing the killer electrocuted with my own eyes." You may say it is not a Christian spirit which animates him. But most parents can understand how he feels.

The Story of Ida Wood

The Human Side of the News

The bitter contest which is being waged before Surrogate Foley in New York City by claimants to the $900,000 estate of Mrs. Ida E. Wood brings out anew the bizarre, fantastic, incredible story of that strange woman who died in 1932.

As a reporter, some five years ago, I saw the final act of the drama unfold.

Living in the Herald Square hotel there was a very old woman. She was 93, in fact — probably the queerest old woman anywhere alive. For she lived all alone in one room. And that room was the weirdest place imaginable.

For it was so filled with rubbish of one kind or another that its ancient lady could barely find her wizened, emaciated frame through the crevices.

And rumors that old lady had lived for many years, in secret, furtively slipping out at night to buy the miserable fare that kept her alive. And it was only when she fell ill and the hotel people had to do something about it that her identity and amazing story came to light.

HER STORY BARED

As she lay unconscious on a ragged pallet, they found among her papers the name of a certain New York lawyer, Judge Morgan J. O'Brien. His son, of the same name, responded and took charge.

And then it was learned that the hermit was Ida Wood, widow of a man who had been famous in his time, Benjamin Wood, publisher of the old New York Daily News and close friend of Jim Fisk and Jay Gould and a high-rolling gambler at poker, faro bank and roulette.

He was a rich man was Ben Wood, and his wife flew high. Whenever he gambled and lost the compact that half of the winnings were to go to her, and always in the time the Wigwam, Ben Wood's gleaming carriage, with coachman and footman on the box, would appear in front of Ben Wood's favorite gambling house down in Fulton street. And there, like as in fairy tales, gold and jewels would sit patiently waiting until Ben was through pulling the tiger—even to the last fair into the night—until she got her spoils.

Often that split amounted to thousands of dollars—for Ben Wood was a plunger.

The years rolled on. Ida traveled abroad and was socially successful. She was received by Napoleon the Third and the Empress Eugenie. In London she danced with the then Prince of Wales. Long-treasured dance programs found in her littered den proved this.

Ben Wood departed this life, and Ida grew old and grew the suspected banks and would have some of them. She drew her cash from all the banks in which she had deposits. And then she simply disappeared.

LOST AMONG MILLIONS

So Ida Wood merely went to a New York hotel to live out her days, way and, as I say, simply disappeared. When Mr. Morgan J. O'Brien, Jr., took charge and brought in the near relatives, Otis F. Wood, Washington Wood, Henry Wise Wood and Benjamin Wood, all nephews, the surprises began.

As they opened the old leather trunks and the innumerable brown parcels, they began to find faces and would-be-fur old gowns, whose value it was difficult to estimate, bolts of linen, yard after yard of fine finest, acquisitated in Spain, Ireland and Venetian point.

And they found whole hoards of jewelry—twelve boxes full—and heirlooms of the days of the last century. And then they began to find cash, hidden in the oldest and most unexpected places, in old shoes, behind strips of torn wall-paper. They found in this manner more than $200,000 in currency.

But that was chicken feed. For then we've got a dozen other episodes than the discovery of the main hoard. You guess what it was. The nurse who had been in charge of the old lady noticed that the counted money whenever she brought in one was missing. So she in effect pretended to sleep and through half-closed eyes saw Mrs. Wood, after counting out a few bills, replacing a small parcel underneath the bed.

That night when Ida Wood went to sip the nurse never saw the parcel. And from there was a pocket sewed to the lining of the shift, near the breast, and Ida Wood from the parcel a generous sum.

$500,000 IN CASH!

So when Mr. Otis F. Wood by phone and when he arrived she handed him the nurse's bag. Inside, by the time the Wigwam, Wood's gleaming carriage, with coachman and footman on the box, would appear in front of Ben Wood's favorite gambling house down in Fulton street. And there, like as in fairy tales, gold and jewels, would sit patiently waiting until Ben was through pulling the tiger—even to the last fair into the night—until she got her spoils.
